This unit is applicable to individuals working within enterprises and job roles subject to licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements including legislation administered by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC).

Conditions relating to ASIC training requirements and accreditation should be obtained from ASIC.

Application of the Unit

This unit is applicable to individuals working within insurance broking enterprises and in broking adviser job roles. For those brokers seeking to meet ASIC training standards:

This unit requires the application of skills and knowledge to identify where the client is seeking general rather than personal product advice and to follow the appropriate steps to provide this level of advice. It also requires clarification of the broker's role in providing this service.
- Tier 2 products are defined by ASIC as:
 - General insurance products other than personal sickness and accident. These products:
 - Do not have any investment component
 - Are subject to standard terms and conditions except for previously disclosed variations
 - Are of a limited life, e.g. 12 months

- Travel insurance products including where the product covers losses arising due to sickness or accident while travelling; and
- Client credit insurance including where the product covers client credit liabilities that cannot be paid due to sickness or accident.
- There is a substantial core and specialist general insurance product and insurance broking knowledge component that must be developed by the adviser as part of the requirements to meet ASIC training standards for Tier 2 general advice.

Modification History

Release	Comments
Release 1	This Unit of Competency first released with FNS10 Financial Services Training Package version 2.0. Has the "tier 2" label removed, it suggests some relevance to ASIC requirements which is erroneous. Replaces FNSIBK402A Provide personal advice in general insurance broking products and services.

Unit Descriptor

This unit is designed for insurance brokers advising retail and wholesale consumers and current clients in standard general insurance products.

The broker advisory process involves reviewing a current insurance program to determine gaps, or scope of the existing policy coverage in order to develop an appropriate insurance plan for the consumer/client. This unit requires skills to access and review risk information and apply knowledge of insurance products to identify and advise on changes to an insurance program with a new business or renewal client.

This unit is applicable to individuals working within insurance broking enterprises and in broking adviser job roles subject to licensing regulation by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC).

Conditions relating to ASIC training requirements and accreditation should be obtained from ASIC.

Application of the Unit

For those brokers seeking to meet ASIC training standards:

- Personal advice is defined by ASIC in its regulatory guide relating to the conduct and training of financial service product advisers. This unit requires the application of skills and knowledge to identify where the consumer is seeking advice based on their personal needs rather than general product advice and to follow the appropriate steps to provide this level of tailored advice. It also requires clarification of the broker's role in providing this service.
- Tier 2 products are defined by ASIC as general insurance products other than personal sickness and accident. These products:
 - Do not have any investment component
 - Are subject to standard terms and conditions except for previously disclosed variations

- Are of a limited life (e.g. 12 months);
- Travel insurance products, including where the product covers losses rising due to sickness or accident while travelling; and
- Consumer credit insurance, including where the product covers consumer credit liabilities that cannot be paid due to sickness or accident.

This unit applies to insurance broking roles and may be applied within organisations of various sizes and across a range of customer bases.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to advise retail and wholesale clients in general insurance broking products and services.

This unit is applicable to individuals working within insurance broking enterprises and in broking adviser roles subject to licensing regulation by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC).

Conditions relating to ASIC training requirements and accreditation should be obtained from ASIC.

Application of the Unit

For those brokers seeking to meet ASIC training standards:

- General advice is defined by ASIC in its regulatory guide relating to the conduct and training of financial service product advisers. This unit requires the application of skills and knowledge to identify where the consumer is seeking general rather than personal product advice and to follow the appropriate steps to provide this level of advice. It also requires clarification of the broker's role in providing this service
- Tier 1 general insurance products are defined by ASIC as:
 - personal sickness and accident insurance; and/or
 - general insurance products the licensee deems non-standard or complex

- Personal sickness and accident insurance may be complex and the choices a client makes may have an increased potential to impact significantly the client's financial situation. Similarly, some general (retail or business) insurance products are not straightforward or standard. In both cases, consumers place a greater reliance on a broker's competence for advice on these products and as such broker training at the higher Tier 1 level is required
- There is a substantial component of generic, core, specialist general insurance and specialist insurance broking knowledge that must be developed by the adviser as part of this unit in order to meet the ASIC training standards for Tier 1 general advice.

This unit applies to insurance broking roles and may be applied within organisations of various sizes and across a range of customer bases.

Unit Descriptor

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to advise retail and/or wholesale clients in non-standard general insurance broking products and services.

This unit requires the application of risk assessment and analysis skills and product knowledge to enable the preparation of a tailored insurance program for a new broking client or remarketing to a current client. It may be applied in the context of marketing an existing insurance scheme offered by the brokerage or one-off business. In the case of scheme business, Element 7 below is not required to be completed.

This unit is applicable to individuals working within insurance broking enterprises and in broking adviser roles subject to licensing regulation by the Australian Securities and Investments Commission (ASIC). It covers the functions undertaken by an insurance broker providing personal advice in Tier 1 retail general insurance.

Conditions relating to ASIC training requirements and accreditation should be obtained from ASIC.

Application of the Unit

For those brokers seeking to meet ASIC training standards:

- Personal advice is defined by ASIC in its regulatory guide relating to the conduct and training of financial service product advisers. This unit requires the application of skills and knowledge to identify where the consumer is seeking advice based on their personal needs rather than general product advice and to follow the appropriate steps to provide this level of tailored advice. It also requires clarification of the broker's role in providing this service
- Tier 1 general insurance products are defined by ASIC as:
 - personal sickness and accident insurance; and/or
 - general insurance products the licensee deems non-standard or complex

- Personal sickness and accident insurance may be complex and the choices a client makes may have an increased potential to impact significantly the client's financial situation. Similarly, some general insurance products offered to clients are not straightforward or standard. In both cases, consumers place a greater reliance on the broker's competence for advice on these products and advisor training at the Tier 1 level is required.

This unit applies to insurance broking roles and may be applied within organisations of various sizes and across a range of customer bases.
