Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- analysis of the information that is required for the effective functioning of the team's work together
- knowledge of the range of information systems that are, or should be, available in the workplace
- ability to recognise what information system changes and improvements will be required in the future.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to appropriate documentation and resources normally used in the workplace.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- demonstration of techniques in working with information management systems
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of relevant technology
- review of documentation analysing information trends and developments
- written reports on future information system needs
- review of preparation undertaken for team members to work with new technology and information system changes.

Guidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- other units from the Certificate IV in Frontline Management.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to conduct potentially complex and challenging negotiations and consultations on new systems development and implementation
- creative thinking skills to explore and generate innovative concepts
- learning skills to stretch boundaries of own knowledge and skills, and to foster similar approaches in others
- literacy skills to analyse and develop potentially complex organisational requirements and documentation for work systems
- numeracy skills to develop and interpret financial estimates
- planning and organisational skills to plan the implementation of new systems and to organise and implement training and learning activities
- research skills to investigate the broader context for system development
- self-management skills to take responsibility for driving system development with a focus on innovation

Required knowledge

- concepts and theories of change management, including ways of introducing change in different organisational contexts and change management communication strategies
- concepts and theories of innovation and how these link to innovation in practice
- in-depth understanding of the ways in which workplace systems can contribute to innovation in the workplace
- project planning and management techniques
- technical context in which the system is being developed
- typical ways in which systems may present barriers to innovation

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- review of energy and resource conservation techniques used to minimise wastage
- demonstration of techniques
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of spreadsheet software functions
- review of spreadsheets produced.

Range StatementRANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Ergonomic requirements may include:

- avoiding radiation from computer screens
- chair height, seat and back adjustment
- document holder
- footrest
- keyboard and mouse position
- lighting
- noise minimisation
- posture
- screen position
- workstation height and layout

Work organisation requirements may include:

- exercise breaks
- mix of repetitive and other activities
- rest periods

Occupational health and safety requirements may include:

- inspections
- organisational procedures regarding incidents, accidents, fire and emergencies
- workplace meetings
- workplace safety procedures
- other consultative activities

Conservation techniques may include:

- double-sided paper use
- recycling used and shredded paper
- re-using paper for rough drafts (observing confidentiality requirements)
- utilising power-save options for equipment

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- culturally appropriate communication skills to relate to people from diverse backgrounds and people with diverse abilities across all levels of an organisation
- information management skills to evaluate OHS data
- interpersonal skills to establish rapport and to build networks with a range of internal and external stakeholders
- organisational and time management skills to sequence tasks and meet timelines
- research and data analysis skills to evaluate interactions between employees, their activities, equipment, environment and work systems
- technology skills to access internal and external OHS data.

Required knowledge

- basic principles of incident causation and injury processes
- legislative requirements for:
 - consultation and communication
 - information and data collection
 - notification of incidents
 - record keeping
 - reporting of incidents
 - specific hazards
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational policies and procedures for managing OHS
- organisational work processes for managing OHS
- appropriate data collection methods for OHS issues
- concepts of risks, factors that affect risk and difference between a hazard and a risk
- internal and external sources for OHS information and data
- principles and practices of systematic approaches to managing OHS
- principles, tools and techniques to identify and control workplace hazards and to manage risks in the OHS context
- relevant state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation, codes of practice and standards
- roles and responsibilities of personnel as specified in relevant OHS legislation
- sources of OHS data.

Range StatementRANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Appropriate techniques may include:

- examination of relevant information and data
- inspections
- interviews
- simulations
- timeline of actions and events
- use of accident models

Incidents may include:

- an event resulting in or having a potential for:
 - injury
 - ill health
 - damage

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for OHS information management improvement
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of the resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- auditing methods and techniques
- concept of common law duty of care
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- facilitation of the use of tools such as PPIs in assessment of OHS performance
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection and strategies for overcoming such problems
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including positive indicators, such as number of safety audits conducted)
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- professional liability in relation to providing advice
- requirements for record keeping that addresses OHS, privacy and other legislation
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- participation in the implementation of OHS information and data systems within an organisation or business unit
- knowledge of relevant legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace documentation, reports and sample software for OHS information and data collation and analysis
- access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines.

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of OHS information and data systems
- demonstration of techniques used to manage OHS information and data systems
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- observation of performance in role plays
- observation of presentations
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection and strategies for overcoming such problems
- review of OHS records
- evaluation of information and data collected
- review of communication of OHS information and

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for providing a systematic approach to hazard identification, risk assessment and risk control, with the emphasis on elimination or, where this is not possible, minimisation of risk. It also includes conceptual models for understanding the nature of hazards. The unit provides a basis for the hazard specific competencies in BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment, and BSBOHS506B Monitor and facilitate the management of hazards associated with plant. This unit is underpinned by BSBOHS403B Identify hazards and assess OHS risks, and BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk. A more advanced approach to risk assessment, which identifies the separate elements of risk analysis and risk evaluation, is provided in BSBOHS603B Analyse and evaluate OHS risk.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
1. Access sources of information and data to identify hazards	1.1. Access external sources of information and data to assist in identifying hazards 1.2. Review workplace sources of information and data to access and assist in identification of hazards 1.3. Seek input from stakeholders, key personnel and OHS specialists 1.4. Conduct formal and informal research to ensure currency of information with workplace issues
2. Analyse the work	2.1. Define, document and communicate occasions

environment to identify hazards	when action for hazard identification is required 2.2.Source tools to assist in analysing potential hazards 2.3.Examine task demands and task environment for impact on the person to identify situations with a potential for injury or ill health 2.4.Examine workforce structure, organisation of work and work relationships to identify situations with a potential for injury or ill health 2.5.Examine work environment for agents with a potential for injury or ill health 2.6.Seek input from stakeholders to clarify and confirm issues
3. Assess risk associated with hazards	3.1.Identify factors contributing to risk 3.2.Identify current risk controls for each hazard 3.3.Evaluate adequacy of current controls (if any), taking account of relevant standards and knowledge 3.4.Identify discrepancies between current controls and required quality of control 3.5.Prioritise hazards requiring further control action 3.6.Document method and outcomes of risk assessment
4. Control risk associated with hazards	4.1.Develop a range of control options in consultation with stakeholders, taking account of the outcomes of the risk assessment and the hierarchy of control 4.2.Identify potential factors impacting on the effectiveness of controls 4.3.Seek advice from OHS specialists and key personnel if required 4.4.Identify and seek appropriate authority and relevant resources to initiate and maintain controls 4.5.Identify and document actions required to achieve change 4.6.Analyse extent of change and reduction in risk, as a result of controls
5. Maintain hazard identification and risk control processes	5.1.Establish and maintain a risk register relevant to the workplace 5.2.Document and communicate risk management procedures to stakeholders and key personnel, as appropriate 5.3.Document and communicate outcomes of risk management processes to stakeholders and key personnel, as appropriate

	5.4. Involve stakeholders and operational staff in risk management processes 5.5. Identify situations where OHS specialists may be required
6. Monitor and review risk management processes	6.1. Determine frequency, method and scope of review in consultation with workplace stakeholders and key personnel 6.2. Ensure stakeholders and key personnel have input to the review 6.3. Identify areas for improvement in the risk management processes and make recommendations 6.4. Prepare action plans, including allocated responsibilities and timeframes for implementation 6.5. Regularly review effectiveness of risk management processes

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for OHS risk improvement
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data
 - contribute to the assessment of the resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- basic physiology relevant to understanding mode of action of physical, biological and chemical agents on the body and how they produce harm
- basic principles of incident causation and injury processes
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- concept of common law duty of care
- difference between hazard and risk
- ethics related to professional practice
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- other function areas that impact on the management of OHS
- principles and practices of systematic approaches to managing OHS
- professional liability in relation to providing advice
- requirements under hazard specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees, including supervisors and contractors
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- types of hazard identification tools, including job safety analysis (JSA)

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- products used in:
 - the application of a risk management approach to identifying hazards
 - assessing OHS risk
 - controlling OHS risk
- how these products were developed and implemented
- knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace or simulated workplace
- access to workplace documentation
- access to office equipment and resources
- access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines relating to risks found in the workplace.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of the hazard identification, risk assessment, control and management actions taken
- demonstration of techniques used to identify hazards, assess associated risks, control monitor and evaluate risks

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of the OHS information system • review of action plans • written reports on hazard identification and risk management activities, matrices and measurements undertaken.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • BSBOHS403B Identify hazards and assess OHS risks • BSBOHS404B Contribute to the implementation of strategies to control OHS risk • BSBOHS603B Analyse and evaluate OHS risk.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to effectively identify hazards, and to assess and control risks associated with plant and equipment, including mobile plant, machinery, electrical equipment, pressure vessels and plant affecting public safety. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.
------------------------	---

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for applying a systematic approach to monitoring the identification of hazards and assessing risk arising from the use of plant, and systems of work associated with plant. The focus is on eliminating the hazard or, where this is not practicable, minimising risks to health and safety arising from plant. The unit examines regulatory requirements for design, manufacture, testing, installation, commissioning, use, repair, alteration, dismantling, storage and disposal of plant. Identification and elimination of occupational health and safety (OHS) hazards at the design stage guides the selection and implementation of appropriate OHS risk controls throughout the life cycle of plant or equipment. BSBOHS504B Apply principles of OHS risk management, covers a generic approach to risk management and should be used as underpinning knowledge for this unit. While hazards associated with plant may include noise, chemicals and ergonomic hazards, these are specifically addressed under unit BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in

1. Identify hazards arising from the use of plant and associated systems of work	1.1. Access sources of information, data and advice on plant and equipment hazards to assist in identifying hazards associated with plant 1.2. Identify hazards in the design, manufacture, registration, supply, installation, commissioning, use, maintenance, testing, dismantling, storage and

	disposal of plant and systems of work associated with plant 1.3. Identify and analyse work environment, tasks and circumstances that may lead to hazardous situations or exacerbate risk associated with use of plant and equipment 1.4. In the process of hazard identification, identify and consult appropriate specialist advisors, stakeholders, relevant key personnel and other parties 1.5. Establish, report and review appropriate procedures for recording and reporting on hazards associated with plant as part of the systematic approach to managing OHS
2. Analyse OHS risk associated with plant	2.1. Determine the method of risk assessment in consultation with operators and stakeholders and, if required, specialist advisors 2.2. Identify and assess risks associated with hazards arising from plant in consultation with operators and stakeholders, taking into account the effectiveness of existing controls 2.3. Develop and regularly update risk registers for items of plant and associated equipment 2.4. Identify risks requiring further control action
3. Control risks associated with plant hazards	3.1. Source information, data and advice on risk control options for plant and machinery hazards 3.2. Involve operators, stakeholders and key personnel in the development of controls 3.3. Adopt control measures for ensuring the health and safety of persons accessing, using and/or maintaining plant by applying the hierarchy of control 3.4. Apply controls for access, egress, dangerous parts, guarding, operational controls, emergency stops and warning devices, registrations and design of plant, and operator certification risks associated with plant 3.5. Use and maintain workplace monitoring processes to eliminate or control risks properly 3.6. Report regularly and appropriately to stakeholders

Implement and monitor isolation procedures in liaison with relevant key personnel, to ensure continued safety of maintenance and other personnel 4.5. Ensure purchasing procedures include actions to address OHS implications of plant and equipment 4.6. Develop, document and communicate maintenance procedures to ensure plant and equipment are safe for use 4.7. Take action to ensure that any modifications to plant or equipment are safe and suitable for the task, and appropriately document and modify work practices as required for safe operation 4.8. Monitor and evaluate maintenance systems for effectiveness, suitability and accuracy to ensure safe operation of plant and equipment, and take action as appropriate
5. Identify and advise on licensing and certification issues associated with plant and equipment	5.1. Identify types of plant (including plant design) requiring registration and tasks requiring operator licensing and/or certification in accordance with legislative requirements 5.2. Document and communicate to managers and relevant key personnel, OHS requirements to meet plant registration, operator licensing and certification, and other legal requirements 5.3. Document and communicate to managers and key personnel, training requirements to meet licensing, certification, registration and other legal requirements 5.4. Analyse training needs to ensure information, instruction and training prior to commencement of work on new plant and equipment and new operating methods 5.5. Monitor and report compliance with regulatory requirements for operator licensing, registration and certification in the workplace 5.6. Identify, document and maintain appropriate records for statutory and specialist plant and associated operator competencies
6. Review and evaluate	6.1. Review effectiveness of control measures and Compare outcomes of OHS risk assessments with criteria to identify risks requiring further risk control and risks deemed as low as reasonably achievable (ALARA) 6.3. Involve stakeholders, key personnel, operators and appropriate specialist advisors, in developing relevant risk control plans for plant 6.4. Maintain appropriate records for the operating of the plant 6.5. Recommend or implement improvements arising from the review process with appropriate key personnel including manufacturers 6.6. Review the system of managing OHS to ensure plant safety

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for hazard control
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- technological skills to use basic measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- basic principles of incident causation and injury processes
- concept of common law duty of care
- difference between hazard and risk
- ethics related to professional practice
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measure
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- plant specific knowledge:
 - basic physics of fluids under pressure and pressure vessels, and the behaviour of pressurised fluid when pressure is released
 - concepts of hazards arising from plant and systems of work associated with plant
 - hazards associated with mobile/fixed plant equipment and risk control strategies
 - industry practices related to permit to work, and isolation and tag out systems
 - registration requirements of plant, licensing and certification competencies
 - roles and responsibilities of employers, employees, supervisors, contractors, designers under OHS legislation
- specific requirements under Australian Safety and Compensation Council guidance material
- strategies for guarding moving parts in machinery, human factors related to machine guarding, safe design principles, features and limitations

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- principles and practices of systematic approaches to managing OHS
- professional liability in relation to providing advice
- requirements for record keeping that addresses OHS, privacy and other legislation
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees, including supervisors and contractors
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- monitoring and facilitating effective identification and control of hazards associated with plant and equipment
- knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to manufacturers' manuals including specifications and operational information and data
- access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines
- access to resources outlining a range of hazards and work situations (e.g. video, interactive CD, internet and other computer--based resources)
- access to workplace equipment and resources
- access to workplace or simulated workplace.

EVIDENCE GUIDEMethod of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of hazard identification, risk assessment, control and management actions taken
- demonstration of techniques used to identify hazards; assess associated risks; control, monitor and evaluate risks
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- observation of performance in role plays
- observation of presentations
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for guarding moving parts in machinery, human factors related to machine guarding, safe design principles, features and limitations
- review of recording and reporting on hazards associated with plant
- updating of risk registers for items of plant and associated equipment
- review of the system for managing OHS.

Guidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- BSBOHS504C Apply principles of OHS risk management
- BSBOHS505C Manage hazards in the work environment
- other OHS units.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit applies to individuals with managerial responsibility for managing OHS in the workplace to consider the impact of agents in the workplace on the health of workers, and the physical and psychosocial impact on workers' health arising from work organisation and work processes. It covers knowledge of occupational health and strategies to deal with occupational health issues. The unit enables candidates to facilitate the application of principles of occupational health to control OHS risk in the workplace. OHS practitioners will identify occupational health hazards, and seek solutions and interventions to bring about change in the workplace. Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Identify the potential for adverse effects on health from agents in the workplace	1.1. Access external sources of information and data to assist in identifying agents in the workplace with a potential to adversely affect health 1.2. Review workplace sources of information and data to access information to assist in identifying agents in the workplace with a potential to adversely affect health 1.3. Consider the role of individual difference in susceptibility to occupational disease or injury in identifying adverse effects on health

	1.4. Identify situations where health professionals may be required
2. Identify the potential for adverse effects on health related to the interaction of the work environment, work systems and people	2.1. Apply knowledge of sources of occupational disease and injury to analyse job characteristics, nature of work and the context of work to help identify situations with potential for physical or psychological harm to employees 2.2. Access workplace and internal sources of information and data, taking account of privacy requirements, to assist in identifying situations with a potential for physical or psychological harm to employees
3. Facilitate the control of risks to health in the workplace	3.1. Apply the hierarchy of control to control risks to occupational health 3.2. Examine workplace policies, procedures and schedules to minimise situations with a potential to cause physical or psychological harm to employees 3.3. Examine organisational communication processes to maximise clarity of roles and employee involvement in these processes
4. Participate in the development of strategies to communicate occupational health information and data	4.1. Research and identify characteristics of target groups 4.2. Interpret and discuss health effects with stakeholders that may result from work and the working environment 4.3. Implement communication strategies in accordance with legal and ethical requirements 4.4. Evaluate and monitor the effectiveness of health communication processes
5. Monitor and facilitate occupational health education and training	5.1. Identify the need for health information and data, and training in consultation with workplace stakeholders 5.2. Identify personnel including health professionals and resources to deliver occupational health training 5.3. Identify and allocate roles and responsibilities for the delivery of training 5.4. Provide health information and data, and education to managers and workers in a manner that facilitates understanding and uptake 5.5. Apply training, evaluation and monitoring processes

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for improvement where OHS risk is involved
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change), and to produce graphs of workplace information and data to identify trends and recognise limitations
- technological skills to use basic measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers and supervisors
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve change in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of communication media

Required knowledge

- basic knowledge of toxicology of hazardous materials and potential health effects in the workplace
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- requirements under hazard specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- sources of occupational disease and their prevention
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
 - contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data, to interpret information and data, and to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - write policies, procedures and plans
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- data gathering skills such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and to action processes in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- concept of common law duty of care
- development of tools such as positive performance indicators (PPIs) in assessment of OHS performance
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the work group
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including PPIs and limitations of other types of measures)
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- principles of effective meetings including agendas, action planning, chair and secretarial duties, minutes and action items
- principles of incident causation and injury processes
- professional liability in relation to providing advice

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant legislation
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material.

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- design and development of systematic approaches to managing OHS, either in an actual workplace, or simulation exercise
- products developed for the design and development of systematic approaches and associated documentation
- how these products were designed and developed
- use of these products
- knowledge of relevant OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material).

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace or simulated workplace
- access to workplace personnel and documentation

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to design and develop occupational health and safety (OHS) information and data analysis, and reporting and recording processes that inform and contribute to the effectiveness of OHS in the workplace, and to evaluate the effectiveness of these processes. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the unit	This work applies to a formal OHS management system or other systematic approaches to managing OHS. The information and data system covers analysing workplace information and data in a systematic manner to ensure effective measurement and evaluation of OHS performance, with the objective of improving the management of OHS. This includes informing management and other stakeholders about OHS performance and meeting legislative requirements regarding the use, distribution and maintenance of records under relevant statutory provisions. This unit covers the design and development of a system for managing the collection, analysis and dissemination of OHS information and data, statistics and records, and is therefore more complex than BSBOHS502B Participate in the management of the OHS information and data systems, which addresses the management of an already developed OHS information and data system.

Appropriately format and disseminate outcomes of information and data analysis considering the target audience, and legal and ethical requirements 4.7. Identify appropriate strategies for improvement and formulate recommendations as a consequence of information and data analysis
5. Monitor and evaluate the effectiveness of information and data collection and analysis processes	5.1. Regularly review OHS information and data collection, recording, analysis and application processes to ensure relevance to the needs of the organisation in managing OHS and compliance with legislative requirements 5.2. Determine frequency, method and scope of review, in consultation with stakeholders 5.3. Make recommendations for improvement to OHS information and data processes as required 5.4. Implement improvement strategies arising from the review

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

- analytical skills to:
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
 - contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- numeracy skills to:
 - carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change) and to produce graphs of workplace information and data, to identify trends and recognise limitations of information and data
 - carry out simple statistical analysis e.g. mean, standard deviation, regression
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data, to interpret information and data, and to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - employ consultation and negotiation skills, particularly in relation to developing plans, and implementing and monitoring designated actions
 - write policies, procedures and plans
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- data gathering skills such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and to conduct action planning processes in OHS matters
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS, and to produce effective graphical representations.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- concept of common law duty of care
- development of tools such as PPIs in assessment of OHS performance
- difference between common law and statutory law
- ethics related to professional practice
- examples of OHS information and data management systems and tools
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- key personnel, including identifying change agents, within workplace management structure
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection, and strategies for overcoming such problems
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including PPIs) and limitations of other types of measures
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles and practices of continuity and validity of evidence retention for potential legal action
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant legislation
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents
- requirements of effective records management systems including collection, filing, retention, retrieval, archiving and disposal
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS

- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- standards related to OHS information and data, statistics and records management including requirements for information and data under elements of systematically managing OHS
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- design and development of processes for OHS information and data collection, analysis, and reporting and recording, either in an actual workplace or simulation exercise
- products developed for design and development of an OHS information and data system
- how these products were designed and developed
- use of these products
- knowledge of legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace information and data
- reports from other parties consulted in developing OHS information and data collection, reporting and recording, analysis and monitoring processes

	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> • access to information and databases for analysis activities • access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • assessment of written reports on the effectiveness of the OHS data analysis, reporting and recording • demonstration of techniques used to record, analyse and report on OHS information • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability • review of recommendations made for indicators of OHS performance • evaluation of specifications prepared for the OHS information and data processes • evaluation of ethical management of information and data collection, recording, analysis and application • assessment of recommendations made for improvement to OHS information and data processes.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • other OHS units.

Application of the Unit

Application of the unit	This unit addresses the knowledge, processes and techniques necessary to analyse and evaluate OHS risk as part of the risk management process. OHS risk analysis involves defining the range of consequences, assessing the effectiveness of existing controls and deciding the likelihood of each consequence, and combining these in some way to obtain a level of risk. Risk evaluation is the comparison of pre established criteria for tolerance and the subsequent ranking of risks requiring control. The situation to be analysed and evaluated may involve a single task or a process comprising a series of tasks. Application of this unit must be consistent with the pertinent sections of the Australian Standard, AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
 - contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- numeracy skills to carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change) and to produce graphs of workplace information and data, to identify trends and recognise limitations of information and data, and effectively use anthropometric tables
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data to interpret information and data, to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - write policies and procedures, plans
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of media

Required knowledge

- basic human cognitive and perceptual capabilities relevant to the design of human-machine interfaces
- basics of anthropometry and biomechanics
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- difference between hazard and risk
- direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - labour market changes
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - workers with specific needs
- human error and implications for design of equipment, work practices and controlling ergonomic hazards
- interdependent relationships between ergonomics and workplace stressors such as psychosocial factors, occupational violence, shift work, repetitive work, awkward postures, lighting, thermal environment and work layout
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards such as AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management, National Standard for the Storage and Handling

Workplace Dangerous Goods [NOHSC: 1015(2001)] and National Standard for Manual Handling [NOHSC: 1001 (1990)]

- physiology and functional anatomy relevant to identifying and controlling ergonomic hazards
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- principles of human behaviour and response to interactions with human, physical and task environment to identify psychosocial hazards
- requirements under hazard-specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- risk factors for manual handling injury and risk assessment techniques for manual handling
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- strategies for minimising risk through application of ergonomic design and engineering, work layout, work processes, work organisation
- types of hazard identification tools including job system analysis (JSA)

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- application of ergonomic interventions to control OHS risk in work design processes and the work environment generally in an actual workplace or simulation exercise
- products developed for application of knowledge and skill in ergonomic interventions
- how these products were developed
- use of these products
- knowledge of the interdependent relationships between ergonomics and workplace stressors.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • access to workplace • reports from other parties consulted in developing ergonomic interventions • access to relevant legislation, standards, guidelines, information and data.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of physiology and functional anatomy relevant to identifying and controlling ergonomic hazards • review of recommendations made to optimise the integration of controls and display the decision making processes within the work system • written examples of reports on ergonomic risks control programs • assessment of reports about the outcomes of ergonomic assessments and interventions • evaluation of recommendations made regarding future interventions.
Guidance information for assessment	Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • other OHS units.

1. Identify health hazards that may result from features of the workplace or working environment	1.1. Identify workplace factors that may affect the health of workers 1.2. Identify health hazards that may result from work processes, work operations, equipment and work procedures 1.3. Identify possible routes of entry to the body and consequent effects on the body for different workplace factors 1.4. Identify situations where OHS specialists and other advisors may be required
2. Analyse the risks of worker exposure to potentially harmful agents and factors	2.1. Determine sources of exposure and related factors to potentially harmful agents and factors in work processes and methods 2.2. Identify equipment, sampling plan and techniques

	for assessing the exposure to selected agents and factors within a workplace 2.3. Interpret and evaluate monitoring and sampling results to provide an assessment of exposure 2.4. Utilise exposure standards in the assessment of risks 2.5. Report workplace measurements, interpretations and recommendations to stakeholders in a suitable format for the target group
3. Design risk control strategies and advise on implementation	3.1. Apply the hierarchy of control to design risk control strategies, noting that personal protective equipment (PPE) is regarded as the least satisfactory control measure 3.2. Identify inadequacies in existing control measures and provide remedial advice 3.3. Develop, select and implement risk control measures when undertaking effective consultation and collaboration with organisation, affected employees and others 3.4. Access external sources of information and data, and specialist advisors as required, on nature of health hazard, level of risk, and risk control options
4. Monitor and evaluate control strategies to minimise workplace exposures	4.1. Monitor and regularly evaluate quality and outcomes of interventions in consultation with stakeholders and relevant employees 4.2. Facilitate modifications to interventions including consultations, as required, as a result of findings of regular evaluation and monitoring 4.3. Identify and document training needs, and arrange training in consultation with workplace stakeholders if required 4.4. Make recommendations regarding future interventions as a result of evaluation and monitoring

Required skills

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems

 - contribute to the strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes
- numeracy skills to:
 - carry out simple arithmetical calculations (e.g. % change) and to produce graphs of workplace information and data, to identify trends and recognise limitations of information and data
 - interpret results from workplace measurements
 - use electronic information and data systems to enter workplace information and data, and to produce effective graphical representations
 - use measuring equipment including reading scales and dials applicable to selected hazards
- research skills to access relevant OHS information and data to interpret information and data, to identify areas for improvement
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - write policies, procedures and plans
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of media

Required knowledge

Required skills

- characteristics of sound and vibration, units of noise, sound pressure levels, noise dose and process of hearing loss
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- difference between hazard and risk
- difference between ionising and non-ionising radiation, and the principles of decay and the effect of radiation on the body
- different categories of chemicals such as dangerous goods, hazardous substances, poisons, carcinogens
- direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s
- effect of electricity on the body and the difference in action of fuses/circuit breakers and resident current devices
- ethics related to professional practice
- exposure standards, their limitations and their practical use
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - labour market changes
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity

- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the work group
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- mathematical knowledge of units of measurement, logarithmic scales, decimals and order of magnitude relevant to making and interpreting measurements
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup
- organisational OHS policies and procedures

Required skills

- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards such as AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management, National Standard for the Storage and Handling Workplace Dangerous Goods [NOHSC: 1015(2001)] and National Standard for Manual Handling [NOHSC: 1001 (1990)]
- physiology related to temperature control of the human body, hazards of working in hot environments and appropriate controls
- physiology relevant to understanding mode of action of physical, biological and chemical agents on the body and how they produce harm
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- requirements for control of work permits/written authorities in workplace monitoring activities
- requirements for individual fitting, use, maintenance and storage of a range of PPE items
- requirements for selection and limitations of use of a range of PPE items
- requirements under hazard-specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- role of control programs for microbiological hazards such as vaccination, local ventilation, decontamination
- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- sampling methodologies, application and related statistical measures
- sources of occupational disease and their prevention
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- toxicology of hazardous materials and potential health effects in the workplace
- types of hazard identification tools including job system analysis (JSA)
- types of hazardous dusts and fibres, hazardous environments, and the possible ill health outcomes from exposure to dusts, particles
- types of measurement and monitoring equipment, including intrinsically safe equipment, calibration requirements and principles of how the equipment takes the measurement and limitations in use

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to:
 - identify areas for improvement with OHS incidents
 - analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- numeracy skills to evaluate a range of information and data formats including graphs, maps, matrices, technical reports
- research skills to:
 - access relevant OHS information and data to interpret information and data to identify areas for improvement
 - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency service personnel

Required knowledge

- write policies, procedures and plans
- use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- issue instructions in an authoritative manner during unusual circumstances
- consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information and data on OHS and to use a range of media.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- development and implementation of crisis management processes, either in an actual workplace or simulation exercise
- products developed for implementing crisis management plans
- how these products were developed and use of these products
- knowledge of emergency-specific requirements under relevant legislation, codes of practice and standards including hazardous substances, dangerous goods and environment protection.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to scenario resources
- access to regular training and planning emergency rehearsals
- access to office equipment and resources
- access to workplace documentation.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- demonstration of techniques used develop and implement crisis management processes
- observation of performance in role plays
- observation of presentations
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of principles of effective liaison with emergency services personnel including ensuring that there is no interference or hindrance to their action
- review of authenticated documents from the

1. Advise on the OHS requirements of the design process	1.1. Inform decision makers about their responsibility for the safety of downstream users and beneficiaries 1.2. Advise decision makers of their obligation under law to design and supply a safe designed product by eliminating OHS hazards and controlling for residual OHS risk 1.3. Promote OHS within the design requirements and include an overall risk evaluation of the designed product's life cycle 1.4. Source and make available to decision makers the most current information of OHS principles, materials, technology and systems for application in the design of the product 1.5. Identify and make available required education and training to enable decision makers to have the necessary skills and knowledge to identify and eliminate OHS hazards, and to control OHS risk in the design phase 1.6. Identify and access relevant sources of information and data, for equipment users in particular 1.7. Consult potential users of the equipment during the

	design phase 1.8. Identify situations where specialist advisors may be required
2. Develop a systematic hazard identification and OHS risk evaluation system for safe design	2.1. Identify OHS hazards and conduct a risk analysis of associated risks across the life cycle of the designed product 2.2. Guide the selection and implementation of the most appropriate OHS risk controls for the designed product from a systematic analysis of the likelihood and consequences of injury or illness arising from exposure to identified OHS hazards 2.3. Ensure hazard identification and risk analysis includes potential alterations to the designed product during its life 2.4. Document decision making during the OHS risk evaluation process and make accessible to all parties 2.5. Establish a residual risk register, recording OHS hazards not eliminated in the design together with possible control strategies, and distribute this information to those involved in the downstream or subsequent life cycle stages 2.6. Monitor the design as it evolves to identify potential new OHS hazards and to manage risks if they become evident
3. Advise on principles of OHS risk control	3.1. Base design to minimise risk on the hierarchy of control 3.2. Minimise the impact of possible failure or defect, by ensuring the designed product includes fail-to-safe action
4. Advise on consultation processes between people involved in the life cycle of the designed product	4.1. Advise decision makers to consider the needs of the range of people who will use or interact with the designed product 4.2. Arrange consultation between all parties during the concept and detailed design phases to identify and eliminate OHS hazards and minimise risk 4.3. Appropriately communicate residual OHS risk in the designed product to those who will use or interact with the designed product throughout its life cycle
5. Advise on contractual arrangements and procurement systems to minimise	5.1. Advise decision makers involved in purchasing and contractual arrangements to include a requirement to eliminate OHS hazards, minimise OHS risks, and provide information and data on residual OHS risk

'purchased' OHS risk	5.2. Include an agreement to carry out a safe design approach in the design brief or draft specifications

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to analyse relevant workplace information and data and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
- research skills to:
 - access relevant OHS information and data
 - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings and to communicate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers, supervisors and other stakeholders
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information on OHS and to use a range of media
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes

Required knowledge

- basic human cognitive and perceptual capabilities relevant to the design of human-machine interfaces
- basics of anthropometry and biomechanics
- difference between hazard and risk
- direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s
- ethics related to professional practice
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- human error and implications for design of equipment, work practices and controlling ergonomic hazards
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - labour market changes
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - workers with specific needs
- interdependent relationships between ergonomics and workplace stressors such as psychosocial factors, occupational violence, shift work, repetitive work, awkward postures, lighting, thermal environment and work layout
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- key personnel, including identifying 'change agents', within workplace management structure
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- pertinent sections of relevant Australian and other standards such as AS/NZS 4360: 2004 Risk management, National Standard for the Storage and Handling Workplace Dangerous Goods [NOHSC: 1015(2001)] and National Standard for Manual Handling [NOHSC: 1001 (1990)]
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- application of OHS risk controls within a collaborative safe design process
- products developed for effective application of knowledge and skill in applying OHS risk controls in a safe design process
- use of these products
- knowledge of professional liability in relation to providing advice.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to reports from other parties consulted in developing appropriate interactions between people involved in the life cycle of the designed product
- access to relevant legislation, standards and guidelines, research or industry data
- access to workplace documentation.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios
- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- demonstration of techniques used to apply principles to control OHS risk
- observation of performance in role plays
- observation of presentations
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of direct and indirect influences that impact on OHS and the environment in the design of product/s
- review of information made available in relation to OHS principles, materials, technology and systems for application in the design of the product
- evaluation of consultation of potential users of the

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- analytical skills to analyse relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
- research skills to:
 - access relevant OHS information and data
 - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
 - relate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - consult and negotiate to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
 - write complex documents on policies, procedures and plans
- project management skills to achieve change and to contribute to the assessment of resources needed to systematically manage OHS and, where appropriate, access resources
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to access and enter internal and external information on OHS
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors etc
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches, and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material
- difference between common law and statutory law
- concept of common law duty of care
- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant legislation
- standards related to OHS information and data, statistics and records management including requirements for information and data under elements of systematically managing OHS
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including positive performance indicators [PPIS]) and limitations of other types of measures
- development of tools such as PPIS in assessment of OHS performance
- methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection, and strategies for overcoming such problems
- requirements under hazard-specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- principles of incident causation and injury processes
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists and risk ranking processes
- sampling methodologies, application and related statistical measures
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - labour market changes
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- conduct of an internal or external OHS audit. ensuring underpinning knowledge of hazard identification, risk assessment and OHS risk management approaches are reflected in the audit tool/s and the methods used for collecting evidence
- products developed for the design and development of audit plans, tools, associated documentation and the systematic examination against defined criteria to determine conformance to planned arrangements
- how these products were developed
- use of these products
- knowledge of auditing methods and techniques.

Context of and specific resources for assessment	Assessment must ensure: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • access to organisation documentation, information and data • access to workplace, including personnel involved in areas audited.
Method of assessment	A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit: <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • analysis of responses to case studies and scenarios • direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate • demonstration of techniques used in conducting an OHS audit • observation of performance in role plays • observation of presentations • oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace • review of audit plan • evaluation of audit tools developed and appropriateness of modifications • assessment of reporting on hazards identified during the audit • review of audit findings and recommendations.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor	This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to make judgements as a consequence of an occupational health and safety (OHS) audit and to evaluate an organisation's arrangements for identifying hazards, assessing and controlling risks, and monitoring and improving the effectiveness of the management of OHS and compliance against agreed benchmarks. No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the unit	This unit focuses on evaluation of the effectiveness of an organisation's management of OHS. Aspects of the integration with other organisational management systems, the appropriateness of participative arrangements and OHS improvements are some components of the evaluation. The scope may cover OHS performance measures and outcomes, strategies, policies, programs, procedures and the organisation's resources. This unit applies to the auditing of systematic approaches to managing OHS, which may or may not be formalised as part of an OHS management system, and can apply to internal or external benchmarks. The scope and benchmark criteria for the OHS audit will be agreed before the commencement of information and data gathering, and may address all areas of the organisation or an identified function, business or geographical area. Achievement of this competency requires a demonstrated knowledge of the requirements to evaluate the OHS management system (OHSMS) that is in place. An OHSMS is that part of the organisation's overall

	management system that, for example, covers developing, implementing, reviewing and maintaining the activities for managing OHS risks. Thus, an OHSMS is one systematic approach to managing OHS. This unit is a companion unit to BSBOHS608B Conduct an OHS audit; together the units address the knowledge and skills required to conduct an OHS audit and to evaluate an organisation's OHS performance. People aspiring to skills for overall responsibility of an OHS audit will require competence in both units.

1. Evaluate effectiveness of systematic approaches to identifying OHS hazards	1.1. Identify workplace hazard identification activities being undertaken and compare them with organisational policies and procedures 1.2. Examine products, processes and systems to determine whether hazards of long latency and low frequency/high consequence are included and minimised 1.3. Examine products, processes and systems to determine whether risks to persons other than employees are identified and minimised 1.4. Identify organisational factors that impact on OHS 1.5. Review outcomes of the evidence gathering with specialist personnel, if required
2. Evaluate the effectiveness of systematic approaches to OHS risk management	2.1. Evaluate appropriateness of the organisation's risk assessment tool/s and processes 2.2. Assess outcomes of the risk assessment process for validity, reliability and inclusion of all major OHS risks, in particular demonstrated use of risk assessment methods in the organisation 2.3. Evaluate risk controls for suitability and effectiveness in relation to the organisation's systematic management of OHS
3. Evaluate the effectiveness of systematic OHS monitoring processes	3.1. Evaluate the scope of organisational processes to monitor the implementation and status of systematic approaches to managing OHS 3.2. Evaluate the quality of information and data obtained from the monitoring processes 3.3. Evaluate the managerial level of response to the issues raised in the monitoring process in relation to the level of risk
4. Assess whether the OHS management approaches have produced improved performance	4.1. Evaluate performance indicators, including positive performance indicators (PPIs) to determine whether they provide a true, reliable and timely measure of the effectiveness of the OHS management approaches to reducing OHS risk 4.2. Compare reported performance with evidence gathered and document differences 4.3. Evaluate outcomes of performance and document them in a clear and objective manner
5. Assess and advise on	5.1. Undertake systematic analysis to identify areas of

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

- analytical skills to:
 - use information and relevant workplace information and data, and to make observations of workplace tasks and interactions between people, their activities, equipment, environment and systems
 - interpret information and data, to identify areas for improvement
- research skills to:
 - access relevant OHS information and data
 - use information and data gathering techniques such as brainstorming, polling, interviewing
- communication skills to:
 - relate effectively with personnel at all levels of the organisation, OHS specialists and, as required, emergency services personnel
 - prepare reports for a range of target groups including OHS committee, OHS representatives, managers, supervisors and other stakeholders
 - employ consultation and negotiation skills to develop plans, and to implement and monitor designated actions
 - conduct effective formal and informal meetings
 - use language and literacy skills appropriate to the workgroup and the task
- project management skills to achieve continuous improvement and change, and to contribute to strategic OHS performance of the organisation
- numeracy skills to carry out simple statistical analysis e.g. mean, standard deviation, regression
- organisational skills to manage own tasks within a timeframe
- information technology skills to:
 - access internal and external information and data on OHS
 - prepare reports and to analyse and evaluate a range of information and data formats including graphs, maps, matrices, technical reports
 - use electronic information and data systems to enter workplace information and data and to produce effective graphical representation
 - use a range of communication media
- attention to detail when making observations and recording outcomes.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- roles and responsibilities under OHS legislation of employees including supervisors, contractors, OHS inspectors
- principles of duty of care including concepts of causation, foreseeability, preventability
- legislative requirements for OHS information and data, and consultation
- roles and responsibilities in relation to communication and consultation for OHS committees, OHS representatives, line management, employees and inspectors
- state/territory and commonwealth OHS legislation (acts, regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material) including prescriptive and performance approaches and links to other relevant legislation such as industrial relations, equal employment opportunity, workers compensation, rehabilitation
- structure and forms of legislation including regulations, codes of practice, associated standards and guidance material
- difference between common law and statutory law
- concept of common law duty of care
- requirements for record keeping that address OHS, privacy and other relevant legislation
- standards related to OHS information and data, statistics and records management including requirements for information and data under elements of systematically managing OHS
- nature and use of information and data that provides valid and reliable results on performance of OHS management processes (including PPIs) and limitations of other types of measures
- development of tools such as PPIs in assessment of OHS performance
- methods of collecting reliable information and data, commonly encountered problems in collection, and strategies for overcoming such problems
- requirements for reporting under OHS and other relevant legislation including notification and reporting of incidents
- difference between hazard and risk
- risk as a measure of uncertainty and the factors that affect risk
- requirements under hazard-specific OHS legislation and codes of practice
- principles of incident causation and injury processes
- characteristics, mode of action and units of measurement of major hazard types
- principles of human behaviour and response to interactions with human, physical and task environment to identify psychosocial hazards
- hierarchy of control and considerations for choosing between different control measures, such as possible inadequacies of particular control measures
- standard industry controls for a range of hazards
- types of hazard identification tools including job system analysis (JSA)
- limitations of generic hazard and risk checklists, and risk ranking processes
- sampling methodologies, application and related statistical measures
- principles and practices of a systematic approach to managing OHS

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- range of risk analysis/assessment techniques and tools, and the application and limitations of those techniques and tools
- requirements of OHS and standards related to systematically managing OHS
- other functional areas that impact on the management of OHS
- internal and external sources of OHS information and data
- how the characteristics and composition of the workforce impact on risk and the systematic approach to managing OHS, for example:
 - labour market changes
 - structure and organisation of workforce e.g. part-time, casual and contract workers, shift rosters, geographical location
 - language, literacy and numeracy
 - communication skills
 - cultural background/workplace diversity
 - gender
 - workers with specific needs
- auditing methods and techniques
- benefits, limitations and use of a range of communication strategies and tools appropriate to the workplace
- organisational behaviour and culture as it impacts on OHS and on change
- ethics related to professional practice
- methods of providing evidence of compliance with OHS legislation
- professional liability in relation to providing advice
- principles of effective meetings including agendas, action planning, chair and secretarial duties, minutes and action items
- organisational OHS policies and procedures
- nature of workplace processes (including work flow, planning and control) and hazards relevant to the particular workplace
- formal and informal communication and consultation processes, and key personnel related to communication
- language, literacy and cultural profile of the workgroup
- organisational culture as it impacts on the workgroup.

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- development of project plans for multiple complex projects
- details of how plans were monitored and outcomes were reported
- knowledge of project life cycle.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to project documentation relevant to project integration
- access to feedback from project stakeholders.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project integration and their application to different situations
- analysis of responses addressing case studies and scenarios which present project integration management issues and problems
- assessment of project reports and examples of project plans.

- procurement and contracting
- project integration
- quality
- risk
- scope
- time

Project plan may include:

- covering document which integrates the requirements of the nine functions of project management using appropriate formats and procedures
- single document
- multiple documents

Internal working environment may include:

- arrangement of project personnel and equipment
- identity and differentiation of the project within the larger environment
- personal working conditions
- physical location of project
- team dynamics

Finalisation plans, procedures and activities may include:

- final audit/reconciliation
- finalisation of account codes and other financial documentation

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- leadership, communication and interpersonal skills to foster compliance with quality benchmarks
- literacy skills to communicate decisions and to write quality reports
- skills in analysing, interpreting and reviewing data to assess performance against quality benchmarks
- problem-solving skills to address gaps in quality assurance.

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- range of quality management methods, techniques, tools and systems and their various applications
- relevant Australian and international standards.

Evidence GuideEVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessmentCritical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- demonstrated experience in directing the successful application of quality management across a range of concurrent projects
- knowledge of relevant Australian and international standards.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- access to workplace quality documentation
- consideration of feedback from project team/s and stakeholders as to how quality was managed.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skill and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance of scope management techniques by the candidate
- analysis of responses addressing different project quality management case studies and scenarios
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of strategies for managing project quality and their application to different situations
- assessment how program quality criteria were identified and communicated
- review of actions initiated to enable continuous improvement.

EVIDENCE GUIDEGuidance information for assessment

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- other units in the Advanced Diploma of Project Management.

Range StatementRANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Quality management* may:

- be conducted non-routinely to meet complex and changing circumstances
- be done independently or by taking the lead in a team environment
- involve consultation with and direction to, project managers regarding their selective involvement of appropriate project stakeholders
- involve the overall direction to project managers for the selection, modification and supervision of the use of appropriate quality management methods, processes, procedures, tools and techniques
- take into account the impact of organisational and environmental change on the program and vice versa

Quality management system* may include:

- ISO 9000 series or as designed to meet the specific needs of the project

Quality improvements* may include:

- formal practices, such as total quality management or continuous improvement
- less formal processes which improve both the product quality and processes of the project, for example client surveys to determine client satisfaction with project performance

This unit describes the performance outcomes, skills and knowledge required to prepare and present information, activities and events to different customer groups.

This unit shares some outcomes with unit THTFTG06B Prepare and present tour commentaries or activities, in the THT02 Tourism Training Package.

No licensing, legislative, regulatory or certification requirements apply to this unit at the time of endorsement.

Application of the unit

This unit applies across a broad range of industry contexts and focuses on the need to use effective interpretation and communication techniques to ensure customer enjoyment and participation in activities or events. The unit goes beyond the delivery of a scripted commentary and requires significant creative input. Work is carried out autonomously within a framework of established guidelines for activity operations.

Skills for the development of activities are covered in CULMS506C Plan and develop activities, events and programs.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements describe the essential outcomes of a unit of competency. Performance criteria describe the performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the element. Where bold italicised text is used, further information is detailed in the required skills and knowledge section and the range statement. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the evidence guide.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1 Make preparations for the activity, event or program	1.1 Confirm details of the specific information, activities or events including objectives, target group and resources with relevant personnel
	1.2 Plan the sequence and methods for delivering the information, activity or event to achieve aims and objectives
	1.3 Prepare facilities, resources and support materials for the delivery of the information, activity or event
2 Present information, activity or event	2.1 Explain the objectives of the information, activity or event to the audience

Required Skills and KnowledgeRequired Skills and knowledge

Required Skills and knowledge

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- communication skills to apply a range of group presentation techniques, to adjust communication approaches to different situations and to provide an interactive experience
- planning and organisational skills to organise and prepare facilities, resources and other support materials
- problem-solving skills to identify and respond promptly to operational problems and develop appropriate responses
- literacy skills to interpret, use and tailor a wide range of support materials.

Required knowledge

- subject matter around which the activity is developed
- available sources of expert advice on the relevant subject matter
- typical resources required for delivery of activities relevant to the workplace context
- presentation and interpretive techniques, including use of role-playing, storytelling, voice techniques, humour, sensory awareness exercises, visual aids and props, games and activities
- different learning styles and their application to different customer groups
- features of policies, procedures and practices relating to the provision of public activities, events and programs
- legislation that impacts on the delivery of activities, including child protection, copyright and Trade Practices
- occupational health and safety issues and regulations relevant to the workplace and activity context
- needs and expectation of different customer groups, including potential cross-cultural communication requirements
- cultural protocols to be observed in the delivery of activities
- ways in which sustainability can be promoted and integrated into activities.

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

Evidence of the following is essential:

- ability to use and adapt presentation styles and techniques to meet the needs of different customers
- knowledge of interpretation techniques
- presentation on more than one topic to ensure that skills can be adapted to different subject matter.

Context of and specific resources for assessment

Assessment must ensure:

- presentation to and interaction with, a customer group of a size and nature that reflects a typical work environment
- access to a venue or site for the delivery of activity, program, event
- use of activity support materials.

Method of assessment

A range of assessment methods should be used to assess practical skills and knowledge. The following examples are appropriate for this unit:

- direct questioning combined with review of portfolios of evidence and third party workplace reports of on-the-job performance by the candidate
- direct observation of the candidate presenting an activity
- evaluation of case studies to assess ability to tailor activities to different customer needs
- oral or written questioning to assess knowledge of interpretive and presentation techniques.

Holistic assessment with other units relevant to the industry sector, workplace and job role is recommended, for example:

- CULMS004B Integrate knowledge of education and learning into museum activities
- CULMS506C Plan and develop activities, events and programs
- CUSGEN02B Work in a culturally diverse

Range Statement

RANGE STATEMENT

The range statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Bold italicised wording, if used in the performance criteria, is detailed below. Essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment (depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts) may also be included.

Activities or events may include:

- guided tours
- exhibitions
- special occasions and festivals
- holiday or weekend activities
- performances e.g. theatre, film, music, dance, craft demonstrations, workshops
- scientific experiments
- excursions, field trips, site visits, guided tours
- school visit programs
- institution open days
- ceremonies
- school programs

Interpretive and presentation techniques may include:

- role-playing
- storytelling
- voice techniques
- use of humour
- sensory awareness exercises
- use of visual aids and props
- games and activities
- interactive communication techniques
- use of audiovisual/new technology

Customers may include:

- local community

- tourists
- families
- children, students, school groups
- elderly people
- people with disabilities who have special needs
- people of particular ethnic or cultural backgrounds
- people of Indigenous cultural background
- people with common professional backgrounds/special interests

Unexpected events or changes in circumstances may relate to:

- systems failure
- changing weather conditions
- inappropriate audience behaviour
- cultural considerations
- emergencies
- re-assessment of customer interests or ability

Evaluation methods may include:

- observation of audience reaction
- questioning of select members of the audience
- completion of audience response forms
- anecdotal evidence

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit.

Essential knowledge:

Recognition of cultural diversity in Australian society with many individuals living in many cultures

Recognition of cultural influences and changing cultural practices in Australia and its impact on diverse communities that make up Australian society

Knowledge of own cultural conceptions and pre-conceptions and perspective of diverse cultures

Recognition of impact of cultural practices and experiences on personal behaviour, interpersonal relationships, perception and social expectations of others

Recognition of culture as a dynamic social phenomenon

Recognition of culture as a range of social practices and beliefs evolving over time

Recognition that the word 'normal' is a value-laden, excluding concept that often precludes acknowledgment of the diversity of people, their life experiences and situations

Recognition of the unique way individuals may experience a culture and respond to past experiences

Knowledge of the principles of equal employment opportunity, sex, race, disability, anti-discrimination and similar legislation and the implications for work and social practices

Knowledge of availability of resources and assistance within and external to the organisation in relation to cultural diversity issues

Knowledge of the role and use of language and cultural interpreters

Essential skills:

Ability to:

Apply culturally respectful practices in the workplace and to demonstrate respect and inclusiveness of culturally diverse people in all work practices

Sensitively and respectfully communicate with persons of diverse backgrounds and cultures

Respond respectfully and sensitively to cultural beliefs and practices that may cause harm

Form effective workplace relationships with co-workers and colleagues of diverse backgrounds and culture

Participate in identifying and implementing culturally safe work practices

Use effective strategies to address and eliminate discrimination and bias in the workplace

Use basic conflict resolution and negotiation skills

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, Required Skills and Knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate this competency unit:

This unit is most appropriately assessed in the workplace or a simulated workplace environment under the normal range of work conditions

Assessment should be conducted on more than one occasion to cover a variety of circumstances to establish consistency

Holistic assessment of this competency unit is encouraged, to ensure application of these skills in conjunction with specific work functions. However, the unit may be delivered and assessed independently

Access and equity considerations:

All workers in the health industry should be aware of access and equity issues in relation to their own area of work

All workers should develop their ability to work in a culturally diverse environment

In recognition of particular health issues facing Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities, workers should be aware of cultural, historical and current issues impacting on health of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

Assessors and trainers must take into account relevant access and equity issues, in particular relating to factors impacting on health of Aboriginal and/or Torres Strait Islander clients and communities

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts.

Work practices may relate to:

Dealing with persons of diverse gender, sexuality and age
Compliance with duty of care policies of the organisation Collection and provision of information Communication
Provision of assistance
Contact with families and carers
Physical contact
Care of deceased persons
Handling personal belongings
Provision of food services

Work practices that are culturally appropriate would be non-discriminatory and free of bias, stereotyping, racism and prejudice.

Cultural diversity may include:

Ethnicity
Race

Language

Cultural norms and values

Religion

Beliefs and customs

Kinship and family structure and relationships

Personal history and experience, which may have been traumatic

Gender and gender relationships

Disability

Sexuality

Special needs

Communication may be:

Verbal

Appropriate gestures and facial and physical expressions

Signage

Through an interpreter or other person

Strategies to eliminate bias and discrimination may include:

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This competency covers the solving of process and other problems, beyond those associated directly with the process unit/equipment, using structured process improvement tools to identify improvements and/or solve problems.

Application of the Unit

Application of this unit

The competency is typically performed by an experienced operator, team leader or supervisor. Generally the person would be part of a team during the solving of complex or systemic problems and would be expected to perform all parts of this unit and at all times would be liaising and cooperating with other members of the team. This includes:

- using a range of formal problem solving techniques
- identifying and clarifying the nature of the problem
- devising the best solution
- evaluating the solution
- developing an implementation plan to rectify the problem.

This unit does not cover the solving of problems undertaken as part of the operator's normal role which is covered in the relevant operation competency unit.

ELEMENT	PERFORMANCE CRITERIA
ELEMENT	Performance Criteria describe the required performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the Evidence Guide.
1. Identify the problem.	1.1 Identify variances from normal operating parameters and product quality. 1.2 Define the extent, cause and nature of the problem by observation and investigation. 1.3 State and specify the problem clearly.
2. Determine fundamental cause of problem.	2.1 Identify possible causes based on experience and the use of problem solving tools/analytical techniques. 2.2 Develop possible cause statements. 2.3 Identify fundamental cause.
3. Determine corrective action.	3.1 Consider all possible options for resolution of the problem. 3.2 Consider strengths and weaknesses of possible options. 3.3 Determine corrective action to remove the problem and possible future causes. 3.4 Develop implementation plans identifying measurable objectives, resource needs and timelines in accordance with safety and operating procedures. 3.5 Develop recommendations for ongoing monitoring and testing.
4. Communicate recommendations.	4.1 Prepare report on recommendations. 4.2 Present recommendations to appropriate personnel.

ELEMENT	Performance Criteria describe the required performance needed to demonstrate achievement of the Element. Assessment of performance is to be consistent with the Evidence Guide.
	4.3 Follow up recommendations if required.

Required Skills and Knowledge

This describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level required for this unit. Competence includes a thorough knowledge and understanding of the process, normal operating parameters, and product quality to recognise non-standard situations.

This unit of competency includes use of analytical techniques in problem solving such as:

- brainstorming
- fishbone diagrams/cause and effect diagrams
- process logic/process requirements
- logic tree
- similarity/difference analysis
- Pareto analysis
- force field/SWOT analysis
- flow charts
- control charts, runcharts and graphs
- scattergrams.

Action plans to solve problems are prepared including:

- priority requirements
- measurable objectives
- resource requirements
- methods for reaching objectives
- timelines
- coordination and feedback requirements
- safety requirements
- risk assessment
- environmental requirements.

Language, literacy and numeracy requirements

This unit requires the ability to read and interpret typical product specifications, job sheets and material labels as provided to operators.

Writing is required to the level of report writing and completing workplace forms.

Basic numeracy is also required, eg to interpret quality data and graphs.

Evidence Guide

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the Performance Criteria, required skills and knowledge, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for this Training Package.

Overview of assessment

A holistic approach should be taken to the assessment.

Assessors must be satisfied that the person can consistently perform the unit as a whole, as defined by the Elements, Performance Criteria and skills and knowledge.

Critical aspects for assessment and evidence required to demonstrate competency in this unit

It is essential that competence is demonstrated in the knowledge and skills defined in this unit. These may include the ability to apply and explain:

- relevant equipment and operational processes
- enterprise policies and procedures
- enterprise goals, targets and measures
- enterprise quality, OHS and environmental requirements
- principles of decision-making strategies and techniques
- enterprise information systems and data collation
- industry codes and standards.

Consistent performance should be demonstrated. For example, look to see that:

- problems are recognised and clarified
- possible causes are identified, based on experience and use of analytical techniques in solving the problem, including:
 - identifying variations
 - identifying cause and effect
 - separating single problems from multiple problems
 - recognising recurring problems.
- fundamental cause of process or equipment faults is determined
- corrective/preventative implementation plans are developed to avoid recurrence of the problem
- implementation plan is presented to relevant personnel.

Assessment method and context

Assessment will occur on the job or in a simulated workplace.

Competence in this unit may be assessed:

- in a situation allowing the generation of evidence of the ability to recognise and respond to problems
- by using a suitable simulation and/or a range of case studies/scenarios
- through a combination of these techniques.

In all cases it is expected that practical assessment will be combined with targeted questioning to assess the underpinning knowledge and theoretical assessment will be combined with appropriate practical/simulation or similar assessment. Assessors need to be aware of any cultural issues that may affect responses to questions.

Assessment processes and techniques must be culturally appropriate and appropriate to the oracy, language and literacy capacity of the assessee and the work being performed.

Specific resources for assessment

This section should be read in conjunction with the Range Statement for this unit of competency. Resources required include suitable access to an operating plant or equipment that allows for appropriate and realistic simulation. A bank of case studies/scenarios and questions will also be required to the extent that they form part of the assessment method. Questioning may take place either in the workplace, or in an adjacent, quiet facility such as an office or lunchroom. No other special resources are required.

Access must be provided to appropriate learning and/or assessment support when required. Where applicable, physical resources should include equipment modified for people with disabilities.

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement relates to the unit of competency as a whole. It allows for different work environments and situations that may affect performance. Add any essential operating conditions that may be present with training and assessment depending on the work situation, needs of the candidate, accessibility of the item, and local industry and regional contexts. Where reference is made to industry codes of practice, and/or Australian/international standards, the latest version must be used.

Context

The competency unit applies to a wide range of processes and equipment. The process manufacturing technical units of competency include a problem solving element where problems specific to that competency unit are to be resolved. This competency unit is where structured problem solving techniques are to be applied more broadly, or with greater depth/rigour than is implied by the problem solving element of the technical units. In large plants or manufacturing organisations with multiple processes, it may apply to more than one process if those processes interact with each other. It applies to all operators across all functions.

Procedures

All operations are performed in accordance with procedures.

Procedures include all relevant workplace procedures, work instructions, temporary instructions and relevant industry and government codes and standards.

Hazards

Typical hazards include leaks, spillages and equipment hazards that can occur during the walk-through of a plant.

Problems

'Anticipate and solve problems' means resolve a wide range of routine and non-routine problems, using product and process knowledge to develop solutions to problems which do not have a known solution/a solution recorded in the procedures.

Typical process and product problems may include:

- non- routine process and quality problems
- equipment selection, availability and failure
- teamwork and work allocation problems
- safety and emergency situations and incidents.

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit covers the activities required to undertake strategic analysis and detection of corruption or fraudulent activities. It includes hypothesising fraud and corruption situations, initiating projects to test newly identified risk areas, analysing trends in fraud and corruption activities and investigations, recommending courses of action and providing information on recommended actions.

Fraud in the unit title incorporates both fraud and corruption.

In practice, anticipating and detecting possible fraud and corruption activity may overlap with other generalist or specialist public sector workplace activities such as acting ethically, promoting compliance with legislation, delivering client services, conducting fraud and corruption risk assessment, etc.

This unit replaces and is equivalent to PSPFRAU502A Anticipate and detect possible fraud activity.

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements are the essential outcomes of the unit of competency. Together, performance criteria specify the requirements for competent performance. Text in bold italics is explained in the Range Statement following.

1. Hypothesise fraud and corruption situations	1.1 Hypotheses are formulated and guidelines specified for input into information system design 1.2 Data and information is collected from a variety of sources and methods including fraud/corruption records, audit records, fraud/corruption risk assessment, past investigations and other organisations 1.3 Hypothetical fraud and corruption situations are used to identify new potential risk areas
2. Initiate projects to test newly identified risk areas	2.1 New projects are initiated and parameters defined in accordance with fraud/corruption control plan 2.2 Significance and value of the project are justified and are consistent with the fraud/corruption control strategy and plan and strategy 2.3 Previous and ongoing activities in the relevant areas are reviewed for their contributions to the outcomes of the project 2.4 Project activities are designed utilising current knowledge, methods and techniques for the identification of risks
3. Analyse trends in fraud and corruption activities and investigations	3.1 All project and investigation outcomes are reviewed to identify emerging patterns of behaviour reflected in data 3.2 Conclusions are drawn from data and statistical information as well as qualitative sources including information gathered and reports from previous investigations 3.3 Risks and strengths are identified as a result of a project's analysis of trends inside and outside the organisation 3.4 Discussion with colleagues and other experienced organisational staff is used as additional source of information on trends 3.5 Networks are used to provide useful contacts and information for investigation in accordance with legislative requirements 3.6 Performance reports are produced which identify trends in fraud

and corruption activities and investigations

- 4.1 All relevant elements are considered during evaluation, prior to recommending course of action
- 4.2 Investigation targets are identified, and suggestions for future areas of investigation are referred to management
- 4.3 Recommendations are made for changes to organisational controls and initiatives to target potential trouble spots
- 4.4 Data is checked for reliability, and practical recommendations are made providing management with feasible options
- 4.5 Management issues and concerns are balanced against public interest and political concerns when framing recommendations
- 4.6 Recommendations are made that balance operational demands against contributions to strategic plan

5. Provide information on recommended actions

- 5.1 Reports are provided containing suggestions for actions and sufficient supporting information for management to adequately resource future projects
- 5.2 Advice is provided regarding appropriate controls and initiatives required to address fraud and corruption
- 5.3 Operational briefings and other presentations are prepared and given as required
- 5.4 Ad hoc opportunities to explain operational risks are taken advantage of, as they arise
- 5.5 Information is given in terms that clearly explain the nature of possible risk, with possible solutions outlined

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Skill requirements

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- analysing trends in fraud and corruption activities and investigations
- hypothesising fraud and corruption situations
- using a range of communication and negotiation styles to suit different audiences and purposes
- undertaking the timely detection of fraud and corruption and the identification of fraud and corruption trends

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- effectively utilising staff and other personnel in the investigation of trends
- explaining complex concepts and recommendations relating to risk control
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability
- applying occupational health and safety and environmental procedures in the context of fraud and corruption anticipation and detection

Knowledge requirements

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- agency structure and core business activities
- legislation, policies and procedures relating to anticipation and detection of fraud and corruption activities, including privacy and confidentiality requirements
- agency procedures relating to public interest disclosures, protected disclosures or whistleblowing legislation
- fraud and corruption and how they relate to the specific functions and activities of the organisation, together with an understanding of ethical standards required by the organisation of its staff, contractors and suppliers
- jurisdictional fraud and corruption control requirements
- agency fraud/corruption control plan
- internal and external reporting guidelines
- best practice initiatives in fraud and corruption control
- anti-discrimination and diversity legislation

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide specifies the evidence required to demonstrate achievement in the unit of competency as a whole. It must be read in conjunction with the Unit descriptor, Performance Criteria, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Public Sector Training Package.

Units to be assessed together

- Pre-requisite units that must be achieved prior to this unit: Nil
- Co-requisite units that must be assessed with this unit: Nil
- Co-assessed units that may be assessed with this unit to increase the efficiency and realism of the assessment process include, but are not limited to:

Overview of evidence requirements

In addition to integrated demonstration of the elements and their related performance criteria, look for evidence that confirms:

the knowledge requirements of this unit

the skill requirements of this unit

application of the Employability Skills as they relate to this unit (see Employability Summaries in Qualifications Framework)

- detection of possible fraud and corruption activity in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Resources required to carry out assessment

These resources include:

legislation, policy and procedures relating to fraud and corruption control, including privacy and confidentiality requirements methods for anticipating and detecting possible fraud and corruption activity fraud and corruption control guidelines

- fraud investigation standards
- agency procedures relating to public interest disclosures, protected disclosures or whistleblowing legislation
- public sector values and codes of conduct
- case studies and workplace scenarios to capture the range of fraud and corruption situations likely to be encountered

Where and how to assess evidence

Valid assessment of this unit requires:

- a workplace environment or one that closely resembles normal work practice and replicates the range of conditions likely to be encountered when anticipating and detecting possible fraud and corruption activity, including coping with difficulties, irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- detection of possible fraud and corruption activity in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Assessment methods should reflect workplace demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular groups, such as:

people with disabilities

people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

women

young people

older people

people in rural and remote locations

Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include, but are not limited to, a combination of 2 or more of:

case studies

portfolios

projects

questioning

scenarios

authenticated evidence from the workplace and/or training courses

For consistency of assessment

Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments

The Range Statement provides information about the context in which the unit of competency is carried out. The variables cater for differences between States and Territories and the Commonwealth, and between organisations and workplaces. They allow for different work requirements, work practices and knowledge. The Range Statement also provides a focus for assessment. It relates to the unit as a whole. Text in italics in the Performance Criteria is explained here.

Methods used to anticipate or detect possible fraud and corruption may include

- the analysis of information about fraud and corruption received in the agency
- the analysis of information about fraud and corruption compiled by an external agency
- analysis of fraud and corruption cases reported and/or investigated
- analysis of data matching across program areas
- incidence of and reasons for any discrepancy
- analysis of other/similar agency risks and trends, both national and international

Elements are the essential outcomes of the unit of competency. Together, performance criteria specify the requirements for competent performance. Text in bold italics is explained in the Range Statement following.

1. Conduct fraud and corruption risk assessment	1.1 Fraud and corruption risk assessment is based upon an understanding of the environment and core business of the organisation and is conducted in accordance with predetermined risk assessment methodology 1.2 Any gaps in the predetermined methodology are identified and reported in accordance with organisational policy and procedures, and options to meet these gaps are proposed as required 1.3 Impacts of possible change in organisational business are allowed for in the conduct of risk assessment 1.4 Data is assessed for validity and reliability 1.5 Consultation and data matching are used to identify patterns 1.6 Risk assessment is conducted using both qualitative assessment and quantitative representation of risks
2. Review processes involved in the risk assessment	2.1 Processes are regularly reviewed in accordance with the objectives of fraud and corruption risk assessment strategy, government policy and risk management standards 2.2 Advice is provided to business sections such as internal audit and other stakeholders regarding issues arising out of fraud and corruption risk assessment 2.3 Options to overcome identified obstacles are discussed with management, affected or relevant staff, and agreed options are implemented 2.4 Assessments are regularly made regarding the effectiveness of fraud and corruption control strategies, and reports are prepared for various audiences

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Skill requirements

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- planning, analysis and evaluation relating to fraud and corruption risk assessment
- using a range of communication, consultation and negotiation styles to suit different audiences and purposes
- providing advice on complex documents such as legislation, policy and recommendations relating to fraud and corruption risk control
- differentiating between the inherent risks and the effectiveness of controls in place
- managing contractors if the fraud and corruption risk assessment is outsourced
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability
- applying occupational health and safety and environmental procedures in the context of fraud and corruption risk assessment

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- fraud and corruption and how they relate to the specific functions and activities of the organisation together with an understanding of ethical standards required by the organisation of its staff, contractors and suppliers
- jurisdictional fraud and corruption control requirements
- agency fraud and corruption control policy
- fraud and corruption risk management methodology
- agency structure and core business activities
- current fraud and corruption control plan
- relationship of the risk methodology to the fraud and corruption control strategy
- fraud and corruption risk factors in the organisation
- anti-discrimination and diversity legislation
- legislation, policies and procedures relating to fraud and corruption risk assessment
- Australian and New Zealand standards - AS/NZS 4360:1999 or as revised

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide specifies the evidence required to demonstrate achievement in the unit of competency as a whole. It must be read in conjunction with the Unit descriptor, Performance Criteria, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Public Sector Training Package.

Units to be assessed together

- Pre-requisite units that must be achieved prior to this unit: Nil
- Co-requisite units that must be assessed with this unit: Nil
- Co-assessed units that may be assessed with this unit to increase the efficiency and realism of the assessment process include, but are not limited to:

fraud and corruption risk assessment methodology and review processes

Australian and New Zealand standards - AS/NZS 4360:1999 or as revised

- fraud and corruption control guidelines and standards
- public sector values and codes of conduct
- case studies and workplace scenarios to capture the range of fraud and corruption risk assessment situations likely to be encountered

Where and how to assess evidence

Valid assessment of this unit requires:

- a workplace environment or one that closely resembles normal work practice and replicates the range of conditions likely to be encountered when conducting fraud and corruption risk assessment, including coping with difficulties, irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- fraud and corruption risk assessment conducted in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Assessment methods should reflect workplace demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular groups, such as:

people with disabilities

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

women

young people

older people

people in rural and remote locations

Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include, but are not limited to, a combination of 2 or more of:

case studies

projects

questioning

scenarios

simulation or role plays

authenticated evidence from the workplace and/or training courses

For consistency of assessment

Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit covers planning actions in response to the organisation's fraud/corruption control strategy, either the preparation of a specific fraud/corruption control plan based on a risk assessment or as an extension of the organisation's documentation of its fraud/corruption control strategy. The unit includes identifying areas for action, gaining commitment to the plan, identifying qualitative and quantitative performance indicators, and documenting and disseminating the fraud/corruption control plan.

Fraud in the unit title incorporates both fraud and corruption.

In practice, developing fraud control plans may overlap with other generalist or specialist public sector workplace activities such as acting ethically, promoting compliance with legislation, delivering client services, anticipating fraud activity, conducting fraud risk assessments, etc.

This unit replaces and is equivalent to PSPFRAU505A Develop fraud control plan.

1. Arrange for coaching/mentoring	1.1 The need for assistance is identified and the benefits of coaching versus mentoring discussed with others to determine best option 1.2 Coaching/mentoring is selected in accordance with the identified benefits 1.3 A checklist is prepared to assist in explaining the purpose and desired outcomes of the coaching/mentoring arrangement 1.4 Assistance is obtained where necessary, to identify and approach suitable person/s to request coaching/mentoring in accordance with the coaching/mentoring plan 1.5 Selected person/s are approached and a coaching/mentoring arrangement is negotiated in accordance with the identified need, personal expectations, the ability of the coach/mentor to provide the service, cultural and other considerations
2. Work with a coach/mentor	2.1 Ground rules are established and realistic expectations set with the coach/mentor 2.2 Options to attain goals are explored and a plan is prepared with

the coach/mentor to formalise the arrangement

2.3 Coaching/mentoring input is used constructively in accordance with established goals

2.4 Time is managed to achieve learning goals

2.5 Progress is monitored and goals achieved or adjusted as required

3. Maximise coaching/mentoring results

3.1 The initiative is taken to build and maintain the coaching/mentoring relationship

3.2 Productive questions are formulated and used to obtain information and feedback from coaching/mentoring

3.3 Active listening is used to ensure coaching/mentoring time is used productively

3.4 Techniques are used for resolving differences/problems without damaging the relationship, or assistance is obtained in accordance with organisational policy and procedures

3.5 New learning is consolidated to maximise coaching/mentoring results

3.6 Closure of the coaching/mentoring arrangement is negotiated once goals have been met or either party wishes to withdraw

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Skill requirements

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- applying legislation, regulations and policies relating to/impacting on coaching/mentoring in the public sector
- using a range of communication techniques including active listening, questioning, giving and receiving feedback, negotiating, constructive conflict resolution
- planning and setting objectives
- self-assessing learning style, the need for coaching/mentoring and ongoing competency development
- building coaching/mentoring relationships
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- applying procedures relating to occupational health and safety and environment in the context of coaching/mentoring

Knowledge requirements

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- legislation, regulations, policies, procedures and guidelines relating to coaching/mentoring in the public sector such as those dealing with privacy, confidentiality, anti-discrimination, harassment, workplace bullying
- the role of coaching and mentoring in competency development and career enhancement
- differences between coaching and mentoring and the benefits of each
- principles of emotional intelligence and its application to working in a one-to-one relationship with a coach/mentor
- equal employment opportunity, equity and diversity principles
- the value of diversity in a coaching/mentoring arrangement
- public sector legislation such as occupational health and safety and environment in the context of coaching/mentoring

They allow for different work requirements, work practices and knowledge. The Range Statement also provides a focus for assessment. It relates to the unit as a whole. Text in italics in the Performance Criteria is explained here.

Coaching

- has a focus on the acquisition of job skills and knowledge
- is results oriented
- is performance, success or goal directed
- emphasises action or improved performance in a specific area
- requires good interpersonal relations
- is provided by a coach who:
- provides learning opportunities or helps identify them
- monitors performance
- provides constructive feedback
- is internal or external to the organisation/public sector
- maintains confidentiality in the relationship

Mentoring

- has a focus on personal growth and learning
- includes a wide range of learning oriented to:
- exchange of wisdom
- support
- guidance in personal or professional growth
- is a relationship, not simply focused on a procedure or activity
- is one person professionally assisting the professional development of another
- is a developmental effort to build skills and knowledge for advancement based on merit, rather than alliances/politically-based partnerships to advance careers based on politics rather than aptitude
- is provided by a mentor who:
- facilitates the mentoree's professional growth
- provides information, guidance and constructive comments
- evaluates the mentoree's plans and decisions
- supports, encourages and, where necessary, highlights shortfalls in agreed performance
- maintains confidentiality in the relationship

Others may include

- supervisor
- peers
- counsellor
- support person
- case manager

Assistance may be provided by

- supervisor
- peers
- counsellor
- support person
- case manager

Coaching/mentoring arrangements may include

- internal partnership
- purchased service from outside the organisation

RANGE STATEMENT

Cultural or other considerations may include

- choosing a coach/mentor with compatible attributes or very different attributes depending on the purpose and objectives of the relationship
- age
- cultural background
- disability
- educational level
- ethnicity
- expertise
- family responsibilities
- gender
- interests
- interpersonal approach
- language
- learning/thinking styles
- life experience
- marital status
- personality
- physical ability
- political orientation
- religious belief
- sexual orientation
- socio-economic background
- work experience
- working styles

Ground rules may include

- relationship is voluntary
- arrangement is confidential
- coaching/mentoring partners should not be in the same chain of command
- mentor should not be a direct manager of the person being mentored
- coach may be supervisor of the person being coached
- for internal arrangements during work hours, supervisors of both coaching/mentoring partners must approve
- coach/mentor's guidance and counsel does not supersede that of the supervisor in work-related matters
- training for coaching/mentoring partners
- a coaching/mentoring agreement
- active involvement of both partners in the coaching/mentoring

process

- fee for service/contractual arrangement
- accessibility of coach/mentor
- options to finalise arrangements, such as:
- 'no-fault divorce' provision where either party can end the relationship any time for any reason, or no reason (Gordon F Shea, 1999, Making the most of being mentored)

Coaching/mentoring plan may include

- explicit expectations/purpose
- well-defined objectives
- problems (past, present, future) that may constrain achievement of the objectives
- clear statement of what the coach/mentor would do
- goals set by the organisation (coaching)
- goals set by the individual and the coach/mentor
- expected timeframe/time commitments
- meeting arrangements - face-to-face, distance, email

Productive questions may include

- open rather than closed:
- what?
- why?
- when?
- how?
- where?
- who?

Listening skills may include

- listening for central ideas
- considering how information applies to the situation/person
- identifying/eliminating emotional triggers
- using techniques for staying in touch with what the speaker is saying, as thought speed outstrips speed of speech
- paraphrasing
- summarising
- using silence to elicit additional information
- using and recognising body language.

Techniques for resolving differences may include

- finding a mutually beneficial solution
- inviting discussion

RANGE STATEMENT

- providing explanations for rejecting advice that is not accepted
- not laying blame
- using 'I' messages
- agreeing to end the relationship and seek alternative arrangement with someone else.

Ways to consolidate learning may include

- identifying patterns
- reviewing learning soon after it occurs
- recording learning in writing, on audiotape or using diagrams
- discussing learning with others
- rehearsing
- arranging additional practice
- applying learning in real work situations.

Overview of evidence requirements

In addition to integrated demonstration of the elements and their related performance criteria, look for evidence that confirms:

- the knowledge requirements of this unit
- the skill requirements of this unit
- application of Employability Skills as they relate to this unit
- provision of workplace mentoring in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Resources required to carry out assessment

These resources include:

- legislation, policy, procedures and protocols relating to the provision of workplace mentoring, including organisation-specific documents where possible
- current workplace mentoring methodologies and strategies
- case studies and workplace scenarios to capture the range of mentoring situations likely to be encountered in the public sector

Where and how to assess evidence

Valid assessment of this unit requires:

- a workplace environment or one that closely resembles normal work practice and replicates the range of conditions likely to be encountered when providing workplace mentoring, including coping with difficulties, irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- provision of workplace mentoring in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Assessment methods should reflect workplace demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular groups, such as:

- people with disabilities
- people from culturally and linguistically diverse backgrounds
- Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people
- women
- young people
- older people
- people in rural and remote locations.

Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include, but are not limited to, a combination of 2 or more of:

- case studies
- portfolios
- projects
- questioning
- scenarios
- simulation or role plays
- authenticated evidence from the workplace and/or training courses

For consistency of assessment

Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments

RANGE STATEMENT

The Range Statement provides information about the context in which the unit of competency is carried out. The variables cater for differences between States and Territories and the Commonwealth, and between organisations and workplaces. They allow for different work requirements, work practices and knowledge. The Range Statement also provides a focus for assessment. It relates to the unit as a whole. Text in italics in the Performance Criteria is explained here.

Mentoring

- has a long-term focus on personal growth and learning
- includes a wide range of learning oriented to:
 - exchange of wisdom
 - support
 - guidance in personal or career growth
- is a relationship, not just a procedure or activity
- is one person professionally assisting the professional development of another
- is a developmental effort to build skills and knowledge for advancement based on merit, rather than alliances/politically-based partnerships to advance careers based on politics rather than aptitude
- is provided by a mentor who:
 - facilitates the growth of the person being mentored
 - provides information, guidance and constructive comments
 - evaluates the plans of the person being mentored, decisions, goals and objectives
 - supports, encourages and, where necessary, highlights shortfalls in agreed performance
- maintains confidentiality in the relationship
- does NOT take over problems and try to solve them
- does NOT give advice, criticisms or solutions, but supports the person being mentored to make their own decisions
- is not the direct manager of the person being mentored

Mentoring agreement/contract may include

- explicit expectations/purpose
- well-defined objectives
- issues (past, present, future) that may constrain achievement of the objectives
- clear statement of what the mentor will and will not do
- goals set by the organisation
- expected timeframe/time commitments

- meeting arrangements - face-to-face, distance, email
- Cultural or other considerations may include*
 - choosing a mentor with appropriate attributes depending on the purpose and objectives of the relationship
 - age
 - cultural background
 - educational level
 - ethnicity
 - expertise
 - family responsibilities
 - gender
 - interests
 - interpersonal approach
 - language
 - learning/thinking styles
 - life experience
 - marital status
 - personality
 - physical ability
 - political orientation
 - religious belief
 - sexual orientation
 - socio-economic background
 - work experience
 - working styles
- Ground rules may include*
 - relationship is voluntary
 - mentoring partners should not be in the same chain of command
 - supervisors of both mentoring partners must approve, where mentoring arrangement is internal
 - mentor's guidance and counsel does not supersede that of the supervisor in work-related matters
 - training for mentoring partners
 - a mentoring agreement
 - active involvement of both partners in the mentoring process
 - internal or external mentoring arrangements
 - 'no-fault divorce' provision where either party can end the relationship any time for any reason, or no reason (Gordon F Shea, 1999, Making the most of being mentored)

Legislation, policy and procedures may include

- State/Territory and Commonwealth legislation and regulations such as:
- public sector management acts
- privacy legislation
- equal employment opportunity, anti-discrimination and harassment legislation
- occupational health and safety legislation
- ethics and accountability standards
- public sector standards
- organisational policy, procedures and protocols

Techniques for resolving differences may include

- finding a mutually beneficial solution
- self-disclosure
- inviting discussion
- providing explanations
- not taking it personally when information provided is rejected
- not laying blame
- using 'I' messages
- accessing assistance
- withdrawing from the mentoring arrangement

Benefits may include

- empowerment
- opportunity to acquire competencies and professional experience
- insights into the organisational culture, attitudes, protocols and expected behaviours
- increased potential for career mobility and promotion
- a supportive environment in which successes and failures can be evaluated
- networking opportunities
- development of professional abilities and self-confidence
- recognition and job satisfaction
- mutual respect

Personal benefits to the mentor may include

- renewed enthusiasm for their role if they are an experienced employee
- challenging discussions with people who may have fresh perspectives

- satisfaction from contributing to another's development
- opportunities to reflect upon and articulate the role of mentor
- improved ability to share experiences and knowledge
- opportunities to test new ideas
- broader picture/strategic overview

Benefits to the organisation may include

- increased productivity
- new competencies in the person being mentored
- staff motivation
- more committed, involved and responsible personnel at all levels
- personal and trusting developmental relationships
- knowledge sharing
- increased people focus
- safeguard investment in high potential people

Elements are the essential outcomes of the unit of competency. Together, performance criteria specify the requirements for competent performance. Text in italics is explained in the Range Statement following.

Elements and Performance Criteria

ELEMENT

PERFORMANCE CRITERIA

1. Identify the purpose of the evaluation

- 1.1 The purpose, scope and terms of reference of the evaluation are confirmed with key stakeholders and approvals are gained in accordance with organisational requirement
- 1.2 The range of documentary evidence, individuals and organisations who can provide specialist input are identified and commitment is gained for their contribution to the evaluation
- 1.3 Information critical to the evaluation is determined to inform the selection of the evaluation methodology and tools
- 1.4 Ownership of the evaluation data/outcomes and right of access to the reported results are determined in accordance with organisational policy and procedures

2. Identify evaluation methodology and tools

- 2.1 Criteria for the evaluation and the audience for evaluation results are identified and communicated to stakeholders
- 2.2 Evaluation methods are selected from a range of alternatives to suit the scope, purpose and outcome requirements of the evaluation
- 2.3 Measuring tools and media are selected/developed to ensure valid and reliable evaluation results
- 2.4 An evaluation strategy is formulated in consultation with key stakeholders to ensure acceptance and commitment
- 2.5 Resource needs are determined in accordance with budgetary constraints and obtained in accordance with organisational policy and procedures
- 2.6 Evaluation infrastructure is established in accordance with

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide specifies the evidence required to demonstrate achievement in the unit of competency as a whole. It must be read in conjunction with the Unit descriptor, Performance Criteria, the Range Statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Public Sector Training Package.

Units to be assessed together

- Pre-requisite units that must be achieved prior to this unit: Nil
- Co-requisite units that must be assessed with this unit: Nil

Co-assessed units that may be assessed with this unit to increase the efficiency and realism of the assessment process include, but are not limited to:

PSPETHC401A Uphold and support the values and principles of public service

PSPGOV402B Deliver and monitor service to clients

PSPGOV406B Gather and analyse information

PSPGOV408A Value diversity

PSPGOV422A Apply government processes

PSPLEGN401A Encourage compliance with legislation in the public sector

Overview of evidence requirements

In addition to integrated demonstration of the elements and their related performance criteria, look for evidence that confirms:

the knowledge requirements of this unit

the skill requirements of this unit

application of the Employability Skills as they relate to this unit (see Employability Summaries in Qualifications Framework)

initial rehabilitation assessments undertaken in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Resources required to carry out assessment

These resources include:

legislation, policy, procedures and protocols relating to injury management

EVIDENCE GUIDE

case studies and workplace scenarios to capture the range of situations likely to be encountered when undertaking initial rehabilitation assessments

Where and how to assess evidence

Valid assessment of this unit requires:

- a workplace environment or one that closely resembles normal work practice and replicates the range of conditions likely to be encountered when undertaking initial rehabilitation assessments, including coping with difficulties, irregularities and breakdowns in routine
- initial rehabilitation assessments undertaken in a range of (3 or more) contexts (or occasions, over time)

Assessment methods should reflect workplace demands, such as literacy, and the needs of particular groups, such as:

people with disabilities

Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people

women

young people

older people

people in rural and remote locations

Assessment methods suitable for valid and reliable assessment of this competency may include, but are not limited to, a combination of 2 or more of:

case studies

questioning

scenarios

simulation or role plays

authenticated evidence from the workplace and/or training courses

For consistency of assessment

Evidence must be gathered over time in a range of contexts to ensure the person can achieve the unit outcome and apply the competency in different situations or environments

Unit Descriptor

Unit descriptor

This unit covers situational assessment of the workplace from the viewpoint of suitability for a worker being rehabilitated. This may be initial or ongoing assessment as the injured worker's capacity changes. It includes conducting workplace and job analyses and negotiating work duties.

In practice, conducting situational workplace assessments may overlap with other generalist or specialist public sector work activities such as acting ethically, complying with legislation, applying government processes, delivering client services, gathering and analysing information, etc.

This is a new unit of competency, added to the Injury Management Competency field of the Training Package in 2004.

- 2.4 The organisation's rehabilitation/return to work policy is promoted and made accessible to staff and managers

3. Monitor and report on injury management outcomes

- 3.1 Injury management and return to work outcome data is collected and collated for measurement against performance standards and targets
- 3.2 Information on claims data and costs is analysed, and outcomes/trends are reported to executive management in accordance with organisational policy and procedures
- 3.3 Stakeholder feedback is gathered on the return to work process and the rehabilitation/return to work system

- 3.4 Rehabilitation budget/costs are monitored and reported on in accordance with organisational policy and procedures
- 3.5 Non-conformance with system requirements is monitored, reported on and followed up in accordance with organisational policy and procedures
- 3.6 System reviews are undertaken in terms of regular reporting and targets/performance indicators, and improvements are identified/implemented in accordance with a cycle of continuous improvement

Required Skills and Knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Skill requirements

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- applying legislation, regulations and policies relating to an injury management system
- applying principles of continuous improvement to the development and maintenance of a quality injury management system
- using communication with diverse stakeholders including interviewing/gathering feedback from stakeholders
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability
- collecting and collating statistical information
- applying procedures relating to occupational health and safety and environment in the context of injury management

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- legislation, regulations, policies, procedures and guidelines relating to injury management
- privacy legislation
- procedures to ensure confidentiality and security of information
- public sector management acts
- industry standards for rehabilitation
- continuous improvement principles
- recordkeeping procedures

Elements and Performance Criteria Pre-Content

Elements are the essential outcomes of the unit of competency.

Together, performance criteria specify the requirements for competent performance. Text in bold italics is explained in the Range Statement following.

Elements and Performance Criteria

1. Plan investigation

- 1.1 Objectives and desired outcomes of the investigation are identified, documented and communicated to investigation team
- 1.2 Relevant legislation is reviewed and stakeholders are consulted to ensure sound preparation for the investigation
- 1.3 Resource requirements are identified and authorised after considering other organisational needs
- 1.4 Communications strategy is established in consultation with team
- 1.5 Continuous review mechanisms are put in place to monitor the progress of the investigation
- 1.6 Investigation management system is used to develop investigation plan, allocate resources and provide for systematic recording of investigation decisions

2. Prepare for investigation

- 2.1 An evidence matrix is developed and updated as required
- 2.2 Assessment is made of possible avenues of enquiry
- 2.3 Elements/proofs of the offence are determined and witnesses are identified
- 2.4 Consultation is conducted with other organisations when investigation impacts on their organisation
- 2.5 Potential for recovery action is assessed and liaison occurs with appropriate authorities to determine when recovery action should begin and what is involved

3. Lead and support investigation team

- 3.1 Personnel are allocated to the investigation based upon their skills, knowledge and abilities in relation to the requirements of the investigation
- 3.2 Specialist resources are located internally and externally to facilitate successful outcome
- 3.3 Administrative support is organised from commencement of investigation
- 3.4 Ongoing advice and support are provided to the team in accordance with the requirements of the investigation
- 3.5 Investigation plan is revised as required in response to

contingencies in consultation with investigative team, and incorporating suggestions where practicable

4. Monitor progress of investigation

- 4.1 Investigation is monitored against the requirements of the continuously updated investigation plan
- 4.2 Evidence collection and handling of witnesses/alleged offenders is monitored to ensure conduct is in accordance with rules of evidence and procedural fairness considerations
- 4.3 Team members are regularly consulted on progress of the investigation in both informal situations and scheduled reviews
- 4.4 Obstacles encountered during the investigation are discussed and solutions found
- 4.5 Key tasks, deadlines and timelines are monitored, risks anticipated and extra resources and/or external expertise authorised as required in accordance with the investigation plan
- 4.6 Requirement for specialists is monitored to ensure their cost-effective use

5. Finalise and report on investigation

- 5.1 Final stage of investigation is supervised to ensure conclusion in court or other body if appropriate
- 5.2 Investigation is finalised within (revised) budget and time restrictions and results are recorded in accordance with legislative and organisational requirements
- 5.3 Administrative/recovery actions are initiated where appropriate
- 5.4 Witnesses, alleged offenders and other persons/organisations affected by the investigation are provided with sufficient information about the outcome
- 5.5 If planned outcome is not achieved, follow-up actions are planned to progress to next stage or to take no further action
- 5.6 Reports are made to management on outcomes relevant to future compliance activities particularly on how organisational procedures assisted or impeded investigation

6. Conduct debriefing

- 6.1 Activities are reviewed against objectives and outcomes of the investigation
- 6.2 Strengths and weaknesses in investigation process are highlighted for future investigations
- 6.3 Precedents and problems are noted for future investigations
- 6.4 Achievements are acknowledged through formal and informal means
- 6.5 Debriefing report is prepared in accordance with organisational policy and procedures

Required Skills and Knowledge

This section describes the essential skills and knowledge and their level, required for this unit.

Skill requirements

Look for evidence that confirms skills in:

- managing the ongoing process of the investigation, particularly for compliance with legislative, judicial and agency requirements
- undertaking project management that contributes to achieving stated objectives of the investigation and effective utilization of resources
- managing contracted services and specialist staff where required
- writing reports requiring formal language and structure and precision of expression
- using communication to suit a range of audiences
- conducting complex oral exchanges in briefing sessions and team meetings
- responding to diversity, including gender and disability
- applying procedures relating to occupational health and safety and environment in the context of investigations

Knowledge requirements

Look for evidence that confirms knowledge and understanding of:

- the role of investigations in achieving the organisation's strategic compliance objectives
- Australian Government Investigation Standards (AGIS)
- legislative and jurisdictional requirements
- organisational policy and procedures
- aspects of criminal, civil or administrative law as apply in that jurisdiction, such as:

This section describes the skills and knowledge required for this unit.

Required skills

- oral communication and language skills to:
 - motivate the learner
 - transfer skills and knowledge
- interpersonal skills to maintain appropriate relationships
- observation skills to monitor individual progress
- literacy skills to:
 - read and interpret organisational documents, legal documents and contracts
 - complete and maintain documentation
- organisational skills to provide guidance and feedback to individuals
- communication skills, including:
 - using effective verbal and non-verbal language
 - using critical listening and questioning techniques
 - giving constructive and supportive feedback
 - assisting learners to paraphrase advice or instructions back to the trainer/facilitator
 - providing clear and concrete options and advice
 - using appropriate industry/profession terminology and language
 - ensuring language, literacy and numeracy used is appropriate to learners

Required knowledge

REQUIRED SKILLS AND KNOWLEDGE

- systems, processes and practices within the organisation where work-based learning is taking place
- operational demands of the work and impact of changes on work roles
- organisational work culture, including industrial relations environment
- systems for identifying skill needs
- introductory knowledge of different learning styles and how to encourage learning in each, for example:
 - visual learners
 - audio learners
 - kinaesthetic learners
 - theoretical learners
- relevant policy, legislation, codes of practice and national standards that may affect training and assessment in the vocational education and training sector
- OHS relating to the work role, including:
 - hazards relating to the industry and specific workplace
 - reporting requirements for hazards and incidents
 - specific procedures for work tasks
 - safe use and maintenance of relevant equipment
 - emergency procedures
 - sources of OHS information

Evidence Guide

EVIDENCE GUIDE

The Evidence Guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of assessment

Assessment must address the scope of this unit and reflect all components of the unit. A range of appropriate assessment methods and evidence-gathering techniques must be used to determine competency. A judgement of competency should only be made when the assessor is confident that the required outcomes of the unit have been achieved and that consistent performance has been demonstrated.

Co-requisite units

Co-requisite units

TAADEL504B Lead and coordinate training services

Modification History

Not applicable.

Unit Descriptor

This unit specifies the competency required to lead and coordinate the provision of training services within a training and assessment organisation.

Application of the Unit

Coordinating training services involves overseeing a training and assessment organisations training operations in one or more areas of service delivery.

This competency includes confirming operational parameters for training; developing the training schedule; organising, guiding and supporting the organisations trainers/facilitators; and monitoring the provision of training services (which may include multi-site and partnership arrangements).

Where this unit is undertaken as a single unit outside of the TAA50104B Diploma of Training and Assessment, learners must demonstrate competency in the following pre-requisite units:

TAADES402B Design and develop learning programs

TAADES501B Design and develop learning strategies

TAADEL401B Plan and organise group-based delivery

TAADEL402B Facilitate group-based learning.

Achievement of this unit requires high-level language and literacy skills, and cognitive skills in such areas as planning, analysis, evaluation and synthesis as well as leadership skills.

This unit focuses on the coordination of training services only. The coordination of assessment services is addressed in TAAASS501B Lead and coordinate assessment systems and services. Systemic evaluations of training services is addressed in TAAACMQ503B Lead and conduct training and/or assessment evaluations.

Related competencies, which include preparing/managing budgets/financial plans, records management, recruitment, selection and performance management are addressed through relevant imported units in the Business Services Training Package. These are listed at the end of this unit.

The competency specified in this unit is typically required by lead trainers/facilitators, program/training coordinators and training managers.

Evidence Guide

Evidence Guide

The evidence guide provides advice on assessment and must be read in conjunction with the performance criteria, required skills and knowledge, range statement and the Assessment Guidelines for the Training Package.

Overview of Assessment

To demonstrate competency against this unit candidates must be able to provide evidence that they have taken responsibility for the operational parameters for training provision in a specified vocational area/field of training services; provided leadership, direction and support to other trainers/facilitators; and have effectively monitored training services in a training and assessment organisation.

Evidence Requirements

Required knowledge includes:

- relevant legal/organisational requirements for the scope of training services
- organisational policies and procedures relating to the scope of training services
- organisation's quality management systems and processes
- content of relevant Training Packages, competency standards or other organisational benchmarks for training services
- content of relevant documented learning strategies to guide and support the provision of training services
- content of relevant documented learning programs and/or work-based learning pathways to guide and support the provision of training services, where relevant
- how to develop delivery plans, learning activities
- delivery and facilitation methods and practices
- conflict resolution techniques
- coaching and mentoring techniques
- evaluation techniques
- OHS relating to the provision of training services, including:
 - OHS obligations of the training and assessment organisation, the trainer/facilitator and learner
 - legislative requirements for information and consultation relevant to safety
 - elements of an OHS management system as it applies to a training and assessment

Required skills and attributes include:

organisation

nature of OHS risks that should be addressed by a training and assessment organisation language and literacy skills to:

communicate in spoken and written forms with a range of trainers/facilitators and clients in a training context interpret legal/organisational requirements, policies and procedures prepare relevant documentation establish and maintain professional working relationships with colleagues/staff and clients planning and organisational skills to:

develop training schedules organise trainers/facilitators organise material/physical requirements coaching and mentoring techniques, including how to:

provide encouragement, feedback, advice and guidance deal with issues/problems promote safety analysis and interpretation skills to:

evaluate delivery and facilitation practices access and interpret organisation's standards and values determine service provision requirements observation skills to:

assess the effectiveness of the organisation's provision of training services distinguish different types of problems, e.g. technical, people and theoretical problem solving skills to:

combine different modes of thinking such as creative and analytic for practical problem solving anticipate future implications for own and others' decisions reliably evaluate alternative solutions manage continuous improvement processes leadership skills to:

set direction for others influence and motivate others guide and support others manage conflict

make informed decisions and recommendations skills to accurately calculate material and physical operational requirements skills to manage diversity policies and procedures skills to develop and initiate support systems for trainers/facilitators

Products that could be used as evidence include:

documented operational guidelines documented training schedules examples of leadership, support and guidance provided to trainers/facilitators written partnership agreement/s (where relevant) analysis of partnership arrangement outcomes (if relevant) documented actions that address evaluations of training services

Processes that could be used as evidence include:

how information and feedback was analysed to address contingencies and irregularities/issues how partnership arrangements were discussed and agreed upon how trainer/facilitator support and guidance needs were identified and met in the case where coordination and management is across two or more sites, how the consistency of delivery and service was ensured

Resource implications for assessment include:

access to legal/organisational documentation access to operating/simulated training environment access to trainers/facilitators and assessors access to clients

The collection of quality evidence requires that:

assessment must address the scope of this unit and reflect all components of the unit i.e. the Elements, Performance Criteria, Range Statement, Evidence Guide, Employability Skills a range of appropriate assessment methods/evidence gathering techniques is used to determine competency evidence must be gathered in the workplace wherever possible. Where no workplace is available, a simulated workplace must be provided the evidence collected must relate to a number of performances assessed at different points in time and in a learning and assessment pathway these must be separated by further learning and practice assessment meets the rules of evidence

a judgement of competency should only be made when the assessor is confident that the required outcomes of the unit have been achieved and that consistent performance has been demonstrated demonstrated performance in coordinating training services in one or more areas of service delivery and which encompasses:

Specific evidence requirements must include:

establishing operational parameters and requirements developing training schedules providing leadership, support and guidance to trainers/facilitators reporting on operational arrangements for training services, including advice on future directions

Integrated assessment means that:

this unit can be assessed alone or as part of an integrated assessment activity involving relevant units in the TAA04 Training and Assessment Training Package. Suggested units include but are not limited to:

TAAASS501B Lead and coordinate assessment systems and services

TACMQ502B Coordinate training and/or assessment arrangements for apprenticeships/ traineeships

TACMQ503B Lead and conduct training and/or assessment evaluations

TACMQ505B Lead a team to foster innovation

Communication may include:	regular guidance, support and direction to trainers/facilitators regular meetings to discuss aspects of training services Leadership skills may include:	techniques for initiating action and directing decision making strategies for presenting a confident, assured and unhesitant manner in response to challenging situations strategies for responding to unreasonable expectations maintaining ethical practice and beliefs modelling expected behaviour and personal presentation standards time management strategies for acknowledging and respecting the attitudes and beliefs of others techniques for promoting active and genuine participation

Coaching and mentoring assistance includes:

- identifying any gaps in training/facilitation skills/competency
- explaining legal/organisational/policy requirements
- clarifying training/facilitation issues
- providing encouragement and direction
- providing feedback/advice/guidance
- promoting safety in training/facilitation
- solving problems

Issues/irregularities may include:

- competency gaps of trainers/facilitators
- difficulties trainers/facilitators have in developing effective group delivery plans/learning activities
- difficulties trainers/facilitators have in developing effective work-based learning pathways
- difficulties trainers/facilitators may have in managing professional relationships with each other or individual learners
- difficulties trainers/facilitators have in being able to address individual learner needs
- difficulties trainers/facilitators have in managing learners/learner interactions
- technical difficulties especially in an e-learning environment
- other trainer performance issues

Contingencies in the training schedule may include:

- issues in meeting learning strategy requirements
- issues in meeting learning program requirements
- issues/gaps in material/physical resource requirements
- delivery issues with personnel, e.g. absenteeism
- venue difficulties
- inadequate provision of records/reports by trainers/facilitators meeting contractual obligations
